U.S. to withdraw from U.N. labor organization

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter announced Tuesday the United States will withdraw from the International Labor Organization Saturday on the advice of labor and business leaders who consider it a tool of Communist and Third World propagandists.

The move marked the first time the United States has terminated membership in a major international organization.

The announcement was made at the White House by Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, who endorsed Carter's decision.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance opposed the move to withdraw from the oldest U.N. agency, an organization that dates back to the old League of Nations.

"I think it was the right decision," Carter told Marshall during a picture taking session.

"I do too," Marshall replied. "It was tough, but right."

In formally announcing the withdrawal, Carter made clear the ILO has not taken the "measures" the United States required to demonstrate it has withdrawn from involvement in international political disputes.

But he added: "The United States remains ready to return whenever the ILO is again true to its proper principles and procedures."

Marshall told reporters he "doubts" U.S. withdrawal will "throw it (the ILO) any more into Russian hands."

Marshall said the United States decided to withdraw because the ILO does not equally enforce labor standards, condemns some countries without due process, becomes too involved in politics and is dominated by governments instead of by labor and management.

Carter's decision was influenced heavily by AFL-CIO President George Meany and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, both embittered by Communist and Third World efforts to "politicize" the ILO.

They argued the agency is controlled by countries that do not respect workers' rights.

They also expressed anger when the ILO condemned Israel for alleged racist policies in 1974 and gave the Palestine Liberation Organization observer status in 1975.

Labor and industry advised Carter their delegates would not return to Geneva no matter what he decided.

Negotiators skirt gas-guzzler issue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Postponing a decision on how to curtail gas-guzzling cars, a House-Senate conference committee Tuesday agreed on noncontroversial parts of a bill restricting use of oil and natural gas in new electric power plants.

The power plant question is included in the coal conversion or No. 2 aspect of President Carter's five-part energy program.

Negotiators decided to move into the new area even though they have not yet agreed on whether to ban or tax cars that get the poorest gas mileage — an issue that was debated for several days with little progress made.

On coal conversion, panel members agreed in general to prohibit use of oil or natural gas in new electric power plants, a move favored by both the House and Senate. But several exemptions were provided for plants that could not use coal or other fuels, or those that are used only when demand for energy is highest.

The exemptions for plants saying they could not use other fuels would apply only to those unable to obtain a reliable source of fuel — because of supply or other problems — and those that would be prevented from using other fuels by environmental regulations.

A number of temporary exemptions also are provided in case pollution control equipment or coal handling equipment is not immediately available.

Hard questions remained in the coal conversion section, however, mainly dealing with how far to go in forcing existing power plants to convert to coal or other fuels such as uranium, burned wastes and synthetics.

The panel has made slow progress since it began efforts two weeks ago to work out compromises on complex energy legislation that will be acceptable to the president and both houses of Congress.

To speed up the process, negotiators agreed Tuesday on an unusual double-track conference. Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd said the House leadership agreed to work simultaneously, in separate conferences, on the tax and non-tax bills.

The leaders agreed that the House could divide its group of negotiators into two groups. One of them, headed by Ways and Means Committee Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., will work on taxes with the Senate's tax negotiators.

The rest of the House negotiators will continue efforts on the other issues still to be resolved in the conference.

That was a step toward resolving a procedural snag which arose because the Senate named two separate sets of negotiators to handle the tax and nontax sections of the energy legislation while the House had named only one group.

Deadline may be extended

ERA may get new life

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department Tuesday said it believes Congress can provide extra time for states to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment but legislatures which have already approved the ERA cannot reverse their decision.

The department, in a legal opinion sent to the White House and the House subcommittee on constitutional rights, said it believed Congress has the right to extend the period for ratification from seven to 14 years.

State legislatures that have ratified the amendment, the department added, do not have the right to rescind the action later.

Lawrence H. Tribe, a professor of law at Harvard, disagreed. "It seems to me bizarre, if not grotesque, for a Congress to believe that ratification can go only one way," he told the subcommittee.

Tribe held states could change their minds because only Congress could judge whether enough states had ratified the Constitution, and that it would decide whether or not a recission can be accepted.

In passing the ERA proposal in 1972, Congress set a seven-year time limit for ratification, following a precedent dating back to the 18th amendment. The present deadline for ratification is March 22, 1979.

Legislatures of 35 of the required 38 states have ratified the amendment but Idaho, Nebraska and Tennessee have since voted to rescind their ratifications.

Assistant Attorney General John M. Harmon, head of the office of legal counsel which drafted the Justice Department opinion, was opening witness at Tuesday's subcommittee hearing on the constitutionality of extending the ratification period.

Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D- N.Y., introduced a bill to extend the time to 1986, saying she feared "stalling strategies" will prevent all states from getting a chance to ratify ERA by the 1979 deadline.

Harmon testified he believes Congress in its next session can adopt an extension of time and this will not give the state legislatures any added right to rescind their previous ratifications.

"It is my view that the (Holtzman) resolution is constitutional, Congress has the power to extend the time period for consideration of the ERA," Harmon told the subcommittee. "The sole responsibility for the exercise of that power is yours."

Television address expected soon

Carter to take energy plan to nation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter will address the nation on his energy proposal soon, the White House said Tuesday, but he has not yet decided whether to postpone a scheduled overseas tour to stay home and lobby for his energy proposals.

"Clearly the timing (for an energy address) will need to come fairly soon," Deputy Press Secretary Rex Granum told reporters. "There has been no final decision on when the speech will be made."

"As he has indicated from the beginning, he did hope at some point to have an energy speech, to talk to the American people about the need to have an energy program."

Although Granum did not discuss that aspect, the White House presumably would aim for a nationally televised speech by the president, who last nationwide address confined solely to the energy crisis came during his first and only "fireside chat" many months ago.

Since then, his grand design for a national energy conservation policy has run into serious trouble on Capitol Hill, where the Senate scrapped most of his key taxation proposals and is now in conference with the House in an attempt to reach some compromise.

Carter planned a supper meeting Tuesday with the congressional Democratic leadership to get their assessment on whether he ought to postpone an 11-day, four-continent tour tentatively scheduled to begin Nov. 22, in order to stay home and lobby for the energy legislation.

The president told reporters Tuesday he does not "know yet" whether he will make the trip as scheduled.

Presidential Assistant Hamilton Jordan said a final decision on that would be made after the meeting with the leadership.

In other White House developments Tuesday:

— Granum repeatedly declined to comment on former CIA Director Richard Helms' "no contest" plea to bargained misdemeanor charges of lying to the Senate, referring reporters to Attorney General Griffin Bell and to Press Secretary Jody Powell's statement that the plea upheld the law and protected national security interests.

— Carter signed the bill increasing the minimum wage to $2.65 Jan. 1 and $3.35 by 1981.

Federal consumer agency dead

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Last ditch legislation to create a new agency to defend consumers' rights in the federal government died Tuesday after House leaders decided the proposal did not have enough support.

"The vote count just didn't look like we were going to make it," said a spokeswoman for Esther Peterson, President Carter's consumer adviser.

As a result the bill was removed from today's House calendar and will not be considered at all by Congress this year.

"We are examining our options in terms of what to do in January," the spokeswoman added.

The development is a victory for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and other business interests which have opposed the agency idea for years, and a defeat for Ralph Nader and the organized consumer movement who were unable to stir sufficient congressional interest in the bill.

The legislation would have created an Office of Consumer Representation. In the nearly decade long congressional debate over the idea the office has also been called the "Agency for Consumer Advocacy" and the "Consumer Protection Agency."

With a Democrat in the White House and Democratic majorities in Congress, backers of the proposal had considered its passage a foregone conclusion earlier this year.

But opposition developed, particularly among House members who were unwilling to go back on campaign promises not to make "big government" any bigger once they got to Washington.

In response to that backers of the legislation revamped it to require that existing consumer offices in various federal agencies would be phased out or combined with the new agency, supposedly at an overall savings to taxpayers.

But Speaker Thomas O'Neill said Monday the bill was still short of votes and would not be brought up if that did not change.

FDA investigating deaths of liquid protein dieters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two federal agencies are investigating reports of several deaths among persons using predigested liquid protein to lose weight, it was disclosed Tuesday.

"We're not saying there have been or have not been deaths" linked to use of the product, said a spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration, which is working with the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta in an effort to answer that question.

State health departments also may be asked to help in checking medical records and any available autopsy reports for a determination of any connection between the deaths and this popular method of dieting, the spokesman said.

"We are working with the CDC to investigate reports of several deaths associated with liquid protein diets," the FDA spokesman said, including one by a doctor who expressed belief the death of a relative resulted from the diet.

It was learned that deaths among those taking liquid protein may number as many as 11, and the FDA said in some cases it has been informed directly of suspected problems with the diet.

The FDA in recent weeks has announced two recalls of liquid protein products because of defective bottling that could have allowed bacterial growth. The agency also is questioning the long-term effectiveness of this type of diet.

Of the overall investigation of liquid protein, the spokesman said: "This has a rather high priority at FDA right now."

In particular, the spokesman said, "We remain concerned about the use of these products without medical supervision."

Some doctors have said one potential danger from unsupervised use of liquid protein is a reduction of potassium levels in the body, which can cause an irregular heartbeat.

In addition, the FDA spokesman said, there is no scientific proof that liquid protein has any weight-reduction advantage "over any other diet which involves the same amount of calories."

The spokesman said research is continuing and probably will show that if liquid protein is effective it will be "primarily for the management of extremely obese people under strict medical supervision."

Don't look now, dear, but there's a deer in our bed

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — It was a family's nightmare, a hunter's dream and a police headache.

Morris Nemerowsky, 76, and his 74-year-old wife, Anna, were asleep in their first floor apartment in the northeast section of the city early Tuesday when a 200-pound deer crashed through a two-foot wide window and landed on their bed.

Nemerowsky grappled with the intruder, not knowing what he was fighting, and was thrown out of bed.

The Nemerowsky's ran screaming from the apartment while the equally frightened deer bounded from room to room, overturning furniture, breaking lamps and battering walls. It finally came to rest under the kitchen table.

Nemerowsky crept back into the apartment, identified the unexpected visitor, and called his son-in-law, Marvin Cotler, who lives nearby.

"There's a deer in my apartment," he shouted hysterically.

Cotler rushed to the apartment and met police who, after assessing the situation, called Harry Scuron, 32, a deputy game protector for Montgomery and Philadelphia counties.

Cotler said, "the deer kept thrashing around under the table. Mr. Nemerowsky was protesting that the police should be careful with his kitchen table."

By the time Scuron arrived, the deer had moved into the living room but attempts by the game protector to snare the animal were unsuccessful.

Scuron said there was nothing to do but shoot it. He said the deer then "took two steps into the kitchen and collapsed."

Nemerowsky was treated for chest pains and his wife for hypertension at the Holy Redeemer Hospital.

The deer was removed on a stretcher and taken to the meat locker at the Christ Home in Warminster, in nearby Bucks County.

Scuron said he believed the deer came from nearby Pennypack Park, was frightened by car headlights and jumped through the window.

23 Pa. legislators, Kline plan $18,000 junket

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Twenty-three state legislators and Lt. Gov. Ernest Kline plan to spend at least $18,000 in taxpayers' money to attend a governmental conference in the Virgin Islands in December.

Sen. Thomas Nolan, D- Allegheny, said the Virgin Islands was chosen as the site of this year's eastern regional Council of State Governments conference because the conference host is a state official there.

Nolan said the information available at such conferences justified the $18,000 cost even during a time when the state is wracked by a four-month fiscal crisis.

The legislature is still looking for a way to fund the state colleges and universities that were left out of the budget the General Assembly passed last August.

Despite Nolan's claim, a brochure sent to the delegates promised time for tennis, golf and scuba diving.

"I can't explain the need for 23 legislators to go down, but I'll tell you why I'm going," said Nolan. "We pick up things when we participate at these conferences."

Nolan said proposals stemming from legislature conferences included an elected instead of appointed state attorney general, sunset legislation and zero-based budgeting.

"If we spend $18,000, I think there will be legislation coming out of it that will be worth much more," said Nolan. "The leadership and committee chairmen should be interested in what happens at these conferences."

Last year's conference, which Nolan said he hosted, was held in nearby Hershey.

Other senators scheduled to attend the conference are: Quentin Orlando, D-Erie; Thomas Andrews, R-Lawrence; Louis Coppersmith, D-Cambria; Budd Dwyer, R-Crawford; Craig Lewis, D-Bucks; and Edward Zemprelli, D-Allegheny.

House members scheduled to attend are: Speaker K. Leroy Irvis, D- Allegheny; and Reps. John Anderson, R-York; Reid Bennet, D-Mercer; Edward Burns, R-Bucks; David DiCarlo, D-Erie; Thomas Fee, D-Lawrence; James Goodman, D-Schuylkill; Amos Hutchinson, D-Westmoreland; Anita Kelley, D-Philadelphia; Charles Mebus, R-Montgomery; Bernard O'Brien, D-Luzerne; Max Pievsky, D-Philadelphia; C.L. Schmidt, D-Westmoreland; Eugene Smith, R-Jefferson; Warren Spencer, R-Tioga, and Frank O'Connell, R-Luzerne.

Pa. budget stalled by elections

HARRISBURG (UPI) — A Senate Committee Tuesday approved a bill increasing personal and corporate income taxes, but Senate leaders said discussion of the legislation and the budget will be postponed until after the Nov. 8 election. The bill approved by the Finance Committee would increase the personal income tax from 2 to 2.3 per cent and the corporate net income tax from 9.5 to 11 per cent. And it includes a provision the business community lobbied for which would allow corporations to carry tax losses from one year forward to offset tax gains in the next year. Although estimates vary, the provision would save companies millions of dollars they normally pay to the state treasury in taxes.

Apple peeling feat unsurpassed

LONDON (UPI) — The 1978 edition of the Guinness Book of Records, essential tome for bettors around the world, came out Tuesday and Kathy Wafler's apple peeling feat remains unsurpassed. The 350-page book, now in its 24th edition, says the longest single unbroken apple peel on record is one of 172 feet, 4 inches, peeled by Miss Wafler, 17, of Wolcott, N. Y., in 11 hours, 30 minutes at Long Ridge Mall, Rochester, N. Y., on Oct. 16, 1976. The apple weighed 20 ounces. The apple peeling mark is among hundreds ranging from bathtub racing and cucumber slicing to spitting and yo-yoing in the human achievements section of the book, which to date has sold more than 32.5 million copies.

Watergate burglar arrested

NEW YORK (UPI) — Watergate burglar Frank Sturgis was held by police Tuesday on charges he threatened a woman who reportedly told a congressional committee she went with Sturgis and Lee Harvey Oswald to Dallas three days before President John Kennedy was assassinated. Sturgis, a Cuban with ties to the CIA and anti-Castro groups, was arrested shortly before midnight Monday on a complaint sworn out against him by Marita Lorenz, of New York City, who reportedly was involved in a botched CIA plot to assassinate Fidel Castro. He was held for arraignment on charges of aggravated harassment and coercion. Police said Sturgis telephoned threats to Miss Lorenz in an attempt to frighten her from testifying before the House Committee on Assassinations.

Carter signs minimum wage bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter signed legislation Tuesday raising the minimum wage to $3.35 an hour by 1981 and acknowledged the $1.05 increase might add to inflation and unemployment. Administration economists estimate the bill — the biggest minimum wage increase in history — will put an additional $9 billion into the pockets of some 5.3 million American workers over the next four years. "This is a great day for people on the lowest rung of our economic ladder," declared Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., during a White House ceremony.

Woman dies in fire

HAZLETON, Pa. (UPI) — A pregnant woman, unable to climb through a second-floor window and leap to safety, died early Tuesday in a fire at her apartment house in this northeastern Pennsylvania community. Hazleton Police Chief Gerard Caso said Cheryl Mierenicki, 24, and her husband, Joseph, managed to get out of their third-floor apartment and made their way through the flames and thick smoke to the second floor. Joseph Mierenicki climbed out onto a ledge then jumped to safety. But Mrs. Mierenicki, who was five months pregnant, could not get out of the window and died of smoke inhalation.

Masquerade doesn't pay off

MERCHANTVILLE, N. J. (UPI) — Five young gunmen who masqueraded as Halloweeners and robbed a former congressman's family Monday night were held pending a court appearance. The robbery occurred at the home of Donald Wolverton, whose father, Charles A. Wolverton, represented New Jersey's First Congressional district for 32 years until 1959. Police said Tuesday Wolverton's wife was able to provide a description of the robbers and their van, and police in nearby Maple Shade picked up the suspects a few minutes later.

Philly schools closer to $50 million

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Philadelphia school system Tuesday moved one step closer to the $50 million bank loan it needs to balance the district's budget and avert its most recent fiscal crisis. The Senate voted 32-16 to remove — for one time only and only for Philadelphia — a requirement that cost the district the $50 million loan and triggered a decision by the banks to refuse $120 million in additional loans. House Democratic leaders said the bill would probably be considered there today. If the measure passes as expected it could be signed into law immediately by Gov. Milton Shapp.

Wallace: It's all mine

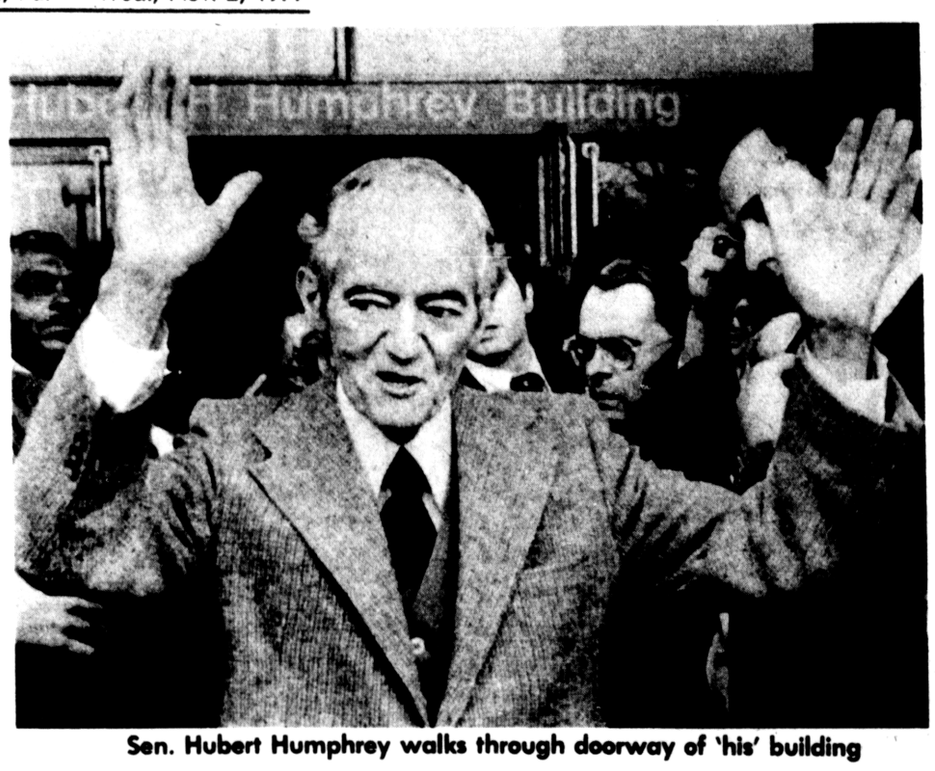

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. George C. Wallace said Tuesday as a U.S. senator all he would have to do is sit silently because the philosophies he espoused during earlier presidential campaigns now are popular in Washington. "I know what knowing people means," Wallace said. "I can sit in the corner and say amen now. It's all been said." Wallace is an unannounced candidate for the Senate.

Henry's wife a trustee

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (UPI) — Mrs. Henry Kissinger, wife of the former secretary of state has been elected to the board of trustees of Lehigh University, it was announced Tuesday. Mrs. Kissinger, the former Nancy Maginnes, becomes the first woman to be elected a Lehigh trustee in the 113-year history of the university. The school was all male at the undergraduate level until 1971, when women were first admitted.

King Hassan accepts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — King Hassan of Morocco has accepted the invitation of President Carter to pay a state visit to the United States in early December. A White House spokesman said the state visit will begin with meetings in Washington on Dec. 7 and 8, and is expected to be followed by visits to Chicago and New York in ensuing days. This will be Hassan's third visit to the United States as a reigning monarch. He previously visited in 1963 and 1967.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey walks through doorway of 'his' building

Washington honors HHH with building dedication

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Washington Tuesday named one of its grandest new buildings in living honor of Sen. Hubert Humphrey — "our beloved Hubert" — and the cancer stricken senator, blinking back tears, said, "My cup runneth over and I love the harvest."

Then he stepped back from the microphone at hushed dedication ceremonies in the ultramodern new Hubert H. Humphrey building, took his wife in his arms, tipped her chin up and kissed her.

The building houses the Health, Education and Welfare Department on Independence Avenue at the foot of Capitol Hill, and in naming it for Humphrey the government departed from the crusty tradition that federal landmarks commemorate dead men.

"This is the department whose programs are filled with love," Vice President Walter Mondale told a dedication crowd of about 500 persons, including many high ranking political celebrities.

"And for that reason I am deeply honored to join with you today as we dedicate this building in the name of our beloved Hubert."

Looking guant but full of sparkle, Humphrey, 66, who returned last week after two months of treatment for inoperable pelvic cancer, got a long standing ovation from the crowd as he arrived at the lobby ceremony with his wife, Muriel, on his arm.

The Marine band struck up "Happy Days Are Here Again," fight song of the Democratic Party.

His voice quivered and his eyes filled with tears as he accepted the honor with a blend of inspirational comment and homespun humor.

"Few men enjoy a comparable privilege of being so lavishly praised while they can still enjoy it, and that is a unique experience," he said.

"Until recently, the only thing that was ever named after me was a grandson, and that was fine; an old folks home in Wadena, Minn.; a bridge at Cape Kennedy, and one mile of road in Colorado.

Panel changes stand on marijuana laws

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday reversed its decision to decriminalize possession of up to an ounce of marijuana, but proposed lightening penalties.

At present, under federal law, the possession of any amount of marijuana is punishable by a $5,000 fine and one year in jail. The compromise, included in a bill to revise all federal criminal laws, would be substantially easier on persons possessing less than 10 ounces.

On a 12-1 vote, the committee approved a provision which would set a fine of up to $100 for persons who possess less than 10 grams of marijuana — about one-third of an ounce.

Although the offense would be a "criminal infraction," the defendant's record would be automatically expunged for both the first and second offense. A person arrested for the third time could have his record expunged if there were no more violations in the following year.

For persons possessing between 10 grams and one ounce of marijuana, there would be an automatic $100 fine for both the first and second offenses, but the record could be expunged after six months or 12 months, respectively, if there were no further violations.

An individual arrested a third time would be subject to the same penalties prescribed for possession of between one and 10 ounces —30 days in jail and a $500 fine.

Senate panel passes bill on SS tax hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee Tuesday approved its version of a bill substantially raising Social Security taxes over the next decade to keep the program operating in the black.

Unlike a version passed last week by the House, the Senate panel's measure would put the increased payroll tax burden much more heavily on employers than employes.

The House, following tradition set when Social Security began in 1935, would tax them equally.

Another big difference is that the Senate committee would raise the "earnings limit" — the amount retirees under age 72 can earn in wages before they begin to lose Social Security benefits — from its present $3,000 to $6,000 in 1979, after which it would rise with wage inflation.

The House would remove the limit entirely in 1982 for persons 65 to 72, so that they could earn any amount of wages and still draw full Social Security pensions. The earnings limit does not apply above age 72.

Also unlike the House bill, the Senate committee version tentatively includes the first installment — $400 million in 1978 —of what may be a three-year program to reimburse state and local governments for some of their welfare costs.

Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., said an agreement with the administration is taking shape whereby amounts for 1979 and 1980 would be included in another bill.

Ex-chess champ charged with hitting lady writer

SOUTH PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Police Tuesday sought former world chess champion Bobby Fischer on a warrant charging him with forcing his way into the home of a magazine writer and hitting her on the face because of his unhappiness over a story about his affiliation with the Worldwide Church of God.

Sgt. Lonnie Johnson said a warrant accusing the 34-year-old Fischer with misdemeanor battery, trespassing and disturbing the peace was issued last Friday.

The warrant is based on a complaint by Holly Ruiz, 37, who also has filed suit against Fischer in Superior Court seeking damages of $5,000.

She claimed Fischer invaded her apartment and ordered her to sign a statement saying she did not inform him that a tape recorder was being used in the interview for Ambassador Report.

When she refused, Fischer allegedly struck Mrs. Ruiz on the face and knee.

She told police that Fischer had agreed to be interviewed by various reporters for the magazine, and had talked for hours with them while a tape recorder was in plain view.

The story, titled "Bobby Fischer Speaks Out!" quotes Fischer as saying he paid the church $94,315 over an eight-year period.

"We don't know where Fischer is," said Johnson. "We're trying to contact his lawyer."

Bell explains Justice decision on Helms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Griffin Bell said Tuesday the Justice Department's decision in the case of former CIA Director Richard Helms "sets the nation on a new course" and the public will decide whether it was the right move.

"It doesn't set so well with me to say we have not done enough to somebody who is a first offender," Bell said. "It is up to the American people to decide whether it is fair and just.

"I think it was a fair disposition, myself, and a just disposition."

Helms pleaded no contest Monday to a misdemeanor charge of failing to testify fully before Congress in 1973 about covert American attempts to prevent the election of Salvador Allende as president of Chile in 1970.

Bell defended the department's decision to charge Helms with only a misdemeanor and to recommend that he be spared a jail sentence.

He was asked by reporters if the treatment Helms got might amount to a license for anyone in intelligence work to lie when testifying about sensitive matters before a congressional committee.

"I can't understand how anybody can say it is a license to commit perjury," Bell said. "It is just the opposite. It seems to me this sets the nation on a new course."

By entering the plea, Helms and the government avoided a trial in which national secrets might have been exposed. The Justice Department recommended that Helms receive a suspended 30-day jail sentence and a possible fine, but the final decision will be made by U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker.

Parker is expected to sentence Helms within a few days.

Asked if Helms benefitted from a special standard for the rich and powerful, Bell said no.

"In my judgment the well-to-do go to prison," he said. "You can rob a bank and get probated."

Bell said the Justice Department considered many factors before it decided to file the reduced charge and thereby avoid a trial, which likely would have resulted if Helms had been charged with the felony of committing perjury.

If Helms had gone to trial, Bell said, his lawyers might have demanded many secret documents that the judge would have examined privately to determine whether they were relevant. If one of the documents was declared relevant, the government might have been forced to dismiss the case in mid-trial to prevent it from being made public, he said.

Bell said groundwork for the plea bargaining finally agreed on last Friday was settled July 25 in a meeting with President Carter, Vice President Walter Mondale and national security advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski.

U.N. releases grim drug addiction report

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — More than 1,000 babies in New York City are born addicted to heroin each year because their mothers are addicts, a U.N. drug agency said Tuesday.

In a grim report on the sharp increase in drug addiction throughout the West, the U.N. Fund for Drug Abuse Control said there are now more than 600,000 addicts in the United States and that half of all street crimes in America are committed by drug addicts.

The agency said there were 2,000 heroin deaths in the United States last year.

The agency blamed Burma, Laos and Thailand for producing most of the raw opium for the illicit trade in narcotics.

Most of the raw opium produced in the world comes from the "Golden Triangle" of Burma, Laos and Thailand, with Burma turning out 500 tons of the 600 to 700 tons produced annually by this region, the agency said.

The 500 tons of opium produced by Burma is sufficient to make 50 tons of heroin which at $4.50 a milligram in Washington streets represents $225 billion.

Citing official and unofficial sources, the agency said a heroin addict in Washington spends $54 daily to get his four doses, which adds up to $20,000 a year.

In the United States, the report said, an estimated 620,000 people are addicted to opium and its derivatives.

By comparison, there were some 100,000 addicts in France last year — five times the number in 1970.

U.N. panel recommends anti-hijacking resolution

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — A special U.N. committee Tuesday unanimously approved a resolution calling on all nations to tighten airport security and join international efforts to halt hijacking.

The draft resolution, sponsored by 50 nations, was aimed at answering a demand for action by international airline pilots who had threatened a 48-hour global strike unless the United Nations reversed its "pathetic" record on combatting terrorism.

The resolution will go before a full session of the world body Thursday, and Secretary General Kurt Waldheim said, "I am confident the General Assembly will act speedily."

"I again urge all governments to become parties to the existing international instruments designed to protect innocent lives from the threats of hijacking," Waldheim said.

The International Federation of Air Line Pilots Associations had demanded U.N. action after hijackers killed a Lufthansa pilot two weeks ago during a 6,000-mile pirated flight across Europe, the Middle East and Africa.

Pharmacists suggest consumers check drug availability

BRODHEADSVILLE — Mrs. Sandy Deihl needed medicine for her 12-week-old daughter and it was nowhere to be found.

Mrs. Deihl, of Brodheadsville, only had one dose of her daughter Salena's medication left (which she takes for a heart condition) and every pharmacist in town simply said, "I'm sorry, but we don't carry it."

"We didn't know what to do," recalls Mrs. Deihl. "I had never run into anything like this before. I just assumed that drug stores carried everything a doctor could ever prescribe."

Finally, she tried the Rite Aid Pharmacy in East Stroudsburg. Her husband went in and was lucky enough to talk to pharmacist Bob Sever.

"He was busy at the time," Mrs. Deihl said, "But when my husband told him our problem, he put everything aside and got on the phone."

The drug was prescribed by a doctor at Children's Hospital in Philadelphia and Sever learned that no one in Monroe County carried it.

"The drug itself is very common", explained Sever, "but not in the syrup form that is given to small children."

Sever called the regional representative of the manufacturer and finally reached him at home. The representative didn't have the drug and had to call several drugstores in the Easton area before he found one that carried it.

"Some pharmacists will simply say they don't have a certain drug," said Sever, "When it's so easy to make a few phone calls and solve the customer's problem right then."

The representative said he'd meet the Deihl's halfway. He drove from Easton to the Wind Gap, where the Deihl's were waiting to receive the medication that their daughter needed so much.

"You wonder how people are and then something like this happens," said Mrs. Deihl. "I don't know what we would have done if we hadn't run into him (Sever)."

The average consumer, like Mrs. Deihl, assumes that all drugstores carry all drugs; and it's simply not true.

"We only carry what the doctors around here normally ask for and we know we can sell," said another Stroudsburg pharmacist. "Doctors in different regions write different prescriptions, and no one store can carry every drug."

In these days of increasing medical specialization, people find that they must often travel outside their county or town to see a certain doctor. A specialist in Allentown, for example, may prescribe a drug that is never called for in this area.

Local pharmacies can order a drug, if the manufacturer carries it, and have it for you the next day. If you need the prescription filled right away, visit a pharmacy either in the neighborhood of the doctor's office or near the hospital where he works.

"I worked up in Honesdale," said pharmacist Sever, "and when I came down here they carried many drugs I'd never heard of, and didn't carry many that I'd handled everyday."

If you have a prescription filled out of town and know you'll need to get it refilled locally, pharmacists recommend that you let them know a few days before you run out, so they can have what you need on hand when the time comes.

"People might think we're in it for the bucks," said one of Sever's co-workers, Dennis Chicken. "But we went to school to help people."

Area Marines to honor old soldier

By RUTH VINCE
Pocono Record Reporter

TOBYHANNA — George Rosenberg considers everyday in his life a "big day," however, Nov. 10 will be an exceptionally "big one" for the 83 year plus three month old Tobyhanna resident.

Rosenberg has been invited to be honored guest at the Annual Dinner of the 4th Marine Division of the United States Marine Corps Reserve, being held at the Sheraton Inn (East), in Easton.

The Marine Corps was inaugurated by an act of Congress on Nov. 10, 1775 and the dinner is being held to celebrate the 202nd anniversary.

Rosenberg, who has the distinction of being the lone survivor of the marines from World War One in the periphery of Tobyhanna, said, "Marines have red, white, and blue corpuscles in their blood. The blue, of course, is hypothetical."

"I coined the phrase about the blue in the blood," the octogenarian said. "Because their true-blue and loyal to the Corps and to each other."

The "Old Vet" remarked, "Back in World War One, I squeezed into my enlistment under the regulation of 65 inches minimum, making me the shortest man in the Corps."

Rosenberg, who was 64 and one-quarter inches, to be exact, noted that when he stood along side of the right guide in the military formation he felt as if he was "standing in a hole."

"Throughout my enlistment I was always referred to as Shorty, both at home and overseas," he laughed.

Rosenberg was discharged at Hampton Roads, Va. late in 1919. He still communicates with a widow of a buddy who soldiered with him overseas.

"Her husband, Charles Butterworth of Philadelphia and I ate, drilled, and prayed together during that important war to end all wars," Rosenberg reminisced.

"Charlie passed away a few years ago and I carry on the vigil. Apparently, this seems to be the end of that World War One era," he added.

Although this one buddy has passed away, Rosenberg has a number of friends in the 4th Division, who take an occasional trip to Tobyhanna, sometimes with their families to visit the "Old Vet" and have coffee with him.

"Such loyalty to the Old Vet is rare these days," Rosenberg said with deep feeling. "At my 83rd birthday in July I received a number of gifts from these friends which encouraged tears on both sides."

Rosenberg will certainly tell those attending the Nov. 10 event about his enlistment, just as he did Sunday in his comfortable home in Tobyhanna.

"There were no women in the Corps those days, although I wished there were, they are nice to have around," he quipped.

"There were no draftees either. To get into the Corps, one had to enlist and pass a rigid physical and mental examination or else," he said.

"The pay for a private was a munificent sum of $21 per month, with $5 added on for overseas duty. A far cry from todays' values," he noted.

"The drill sergeants were tough and made men out of boys and the spirit and morale was always high. Those sergeants always reminded their charges to write home to mother. So they really weren't too hard to get along with," he recalled.

"I have a faint recollection of the assassination of President William McKinley in Buffalo, N.Y. on the eighth of September 1901. The President was attending the World's Fair at the time," he recalled. "For years, my family saved the old newspapers with the black border in memory of the event."

Another item of interest, was the marriage certificate that cost "a mere fifty cents." "Of course the upkeep was high," he added with his unique sense of humor.

Rosenberg's advice to the youngsters today is to join the Marine Corps, not only to serve their country but to develop mind, body, and spirit.

Rosenberg said he is very grateful to Major Robert Melanson and his many friends for inviting him to break bread with them on the happy occasion of the 202nd celebration.

Western Pocono Lions Club picks outstanding citizens

BRODHEADSVILLE — Viola Leamy and J. Ralph Custer have been named outstanding citizens of the West End for 1977 by the Western Pocono Lions Club; they will be honored at a special dinner to be held Nov. 5 at the Lily Pond Lodge in Saylorsburg.

Mrs. Leamy is president of the Fairview Senior Citizen's Club of the West End and resides in Brodheadsville and Custer, an active Lion and a Brodheadsville resident, she has lived in and out of the West End for 53 years.

Annually, the local service club selects a man and woman for the outstanding citizen award; it is the fifth such year that the awards have been made. Three years ago the awards began to be presented to both a woman and a man.

It is the Lions Club members according to awards committee chairman John Nye, that nominate members of the West End Community who have rendered outstanding service during the past.

The final award winners are selected following a general ballot of the entire membership. Presenting plaques to the award recipients on Saturday night will be Lion Club President Jim Williams.

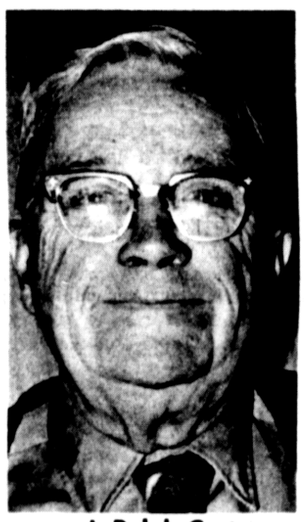

Mrs. Leamy, whose Robyn's Nest cottage overlooks Saylors Lake, has been instrumental in helping the Fairview Club grow to a membership of more than 200 in a three-year period — Mrs. Leamy has served as the club president since helping to organize it initially.

She has helped to organize and coordinate bus trips for local senior citizens and other interested residents.

A former member of the Monroe County Nutrition Advisory Council, in 1975 she helped to coordinate the opening of the West End Nutrition Program in Brodheadsville. She was instrumental at that time in planning parties and making favors for nutrition center guests.

Viola Leamy

J. Ralph Custer

A member of the advisory council of the Monroe County and the advisory council of the tri-county area agency of aging, Mrs. Leamy this summer was selected to represent Monroe County at a special convention held in Hershey for the Governor's Regional Task Force.

Mrs. Leamy is a member of the West End Ecumenical Council and has worked in the council's tent at the West End Fair. She has been active at Our Lady Queen of Peace Catholic Church in Brodheadsville and has donated her baking talents to the Diabetes Association and to making gifts for area nursing homes.

Custer, who was born in Bridgeton, N.J., and was active in scouting there, so much so, that eventually he became assistant scoutmaster, is a 50-year mason. During his long association with the Western Pocono Community Lions Club, he has served on every committee and in every single office expect that of president. He is currently program chairman for the group, and at one time was a board member for the local service club.

He was a governing council member of the Zion United Church Lutheran in Brodheadsville, serves on the church property committee and is a head usher there.

He is a board member of the Western Pocono Community Library and a member of the Monroe County Coin Club.

In the past he was a member of a joint service committee trying to improve telephone service in the West End and he was an active participant several years ago in helping to establish land — use seminars sponsored by the local joint service clubs.

Custer attended Temple University and graduate with a degree in heating and engineering. He initially learned the heating trade in his father's plumbing and heating business.

He is now employed by R.W. Altemose's store in Brodheadsville. At one time he served as president of the Kiwanis Club in Bridgeton, N.J. He has been married for 53 years and has two children.

School purchase to slow

DINGMANS FERRY — Members of the Delaware Township PTA want the federal government to buy their school in Dingmans Ferry before it's overrun by bears and vandals.

The PTA has sent a letter to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers urging it to buy the school once the money becomes available.

PTA member Tina Dewar said the Corps has purchased nearly every building in the area and will soon isolate the school.

She said when the township building and firehouse are moved, the school will be a 10 minute drive from the heart of the community.

The Corps has been buying properties in the area for inclusion in the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area but has not purchased the school.

Mrs. Dewar said Delaware Valley School District officials don't went to build a new school until the Corps buys the old building. She said as long as the school is occupied, the Corps must replace the facility, including the well and sewerage system.

Should the children move before hand, the Corps would not have to reimburse the district as much, she said.

a copy of the PTA's letter has been sent to Delaware Valley Superintendent Dr. William J. Reidy Jr., who is being asked to muster support for the PTA among school board members.

Mrs. Dewar said parents are worried about having an isolated school near the Delaware Township dump, which attracts bears. She also fears the school could become a target for vandals.

There is also the problem of being 11 miles from the heart of the community, she said. That includes the firehouse.

LCB fines firm

HARRISBURG — A Brodheadsville establishment has been fined $200 by the state Liquor Control Board for allowing patrons to contact or associate with entertainers a board spokesman said Tuesday. The firm is West End Co., Inc., the spokesman said.

Education program on disability

STROUDSBURG — The program "What is a Learning Disability" will be presented to interested parents and educators in the area at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 2.

The program, presented by the Monroe County Assn. for Children with Learning Disabilities, will take place in St. John's Lutheran Church, 9 N. Ninth St., Stroudsburg.

Speakers will be Joanna Philips, instructional advisor.

Guard to hold Olympiad

HONESDALE — The First Battalion (Mech), 109th Infantry, Pennsylvania Army National Guard, will sponsor its Fourth Annual Field Day Olympiad on Saturday, Nov. 5, at the Honesdale High School.

The first of 18 scheduled events will begin at 12:30 p.m. The public is invited.

The Olympiad honors the memory of the late Chief Warrant Officer Joseph A. Passo. Passo was a 26-year veteran of the 109th Infantry and had been active in Scranton area sports programs for years.

Lt. Col. Peter Krenitsky, commanding officer of the First Battalion, said teams from the five companies comprising the battalion will be entered in the Olympiad. They include: Company A of Honesdale, Company B of Carbondale, Company C of East Stroudsburg, and, Headquarters and Support companies of Scranton.

Military and athletic events will be featured and individual awards will be given for first place finishers in all events. In addition, a unit award will be presented to the highest scoring team.

Among the military events are: map reading, tent pitching, radio communications, assembling of weapons, vehicle maintenance, first aid, wire communications, and fire detection center operations. The actual firing of weapons, which is a part of the Olympiad, took place recently at Fort Indiantown Gap.

The athletic contests include: one mile run, one-half mile relay, 100-yard shuttle, and a tug-of-war.

Experiment worth watching

There's an interesting economic experiment going on right now, and it would pay a hefty dividend if the industrial nations would pay close attention.

Israel, it seems, has elected to take a particularly bitter dose of fiscal medicine, and the prescription was written by our Nobel laureate in economics, Prof. Milton Friedman.

In brief, Israel has decided to remove controls on foreign currency, devalue its monetary unit, the pound, and allow price and wage freedom unheard of until now in that socialistic nation.

Friedman won his Nobel prize last year for his monetarist theories. A basic element in those theories is that one cannot hope to succeed with a policy that clamps tight controls on the free exchange of foreign money.

The Israelis might not have bought that, except that something like $3 billion is being held by Israeli citizens in foreign banks, because once that money would be brought into the nation, it couldn't be brought out again, except for a maximum of $3,000. Ironically, it was that law that toppled former prime minister Rabin, when it became known his wife had more than the amount allowed stashed in a U.S. bank.

Free to dabble in foreign currency, Israelites have staged a minor rush on the banks, which the government had thoughtfully closed for a day until the announcement of the new policy had had time to sink in. But things will quiet down, and the government is banking on much of that $3 billion coming back home where it can do some good. It also is banking on Friedman being right, that a freed-up monetary system and removal of fiscal controls will reverse the economic problems that have beseiged the country in the last few years.

Since Friedman has several other ideas about monetary control, most of which would have specific application in the United States, it would be well for our officials to watch the Israeli experiment closely. If it works, then they would be well advised to call in Dr. Friedman for a consultation about the way the Federal Reserve has been playing with the money supply, causing stock market palpitations and a feeling of gloom in economic circles.

Just like the movies

A film commission? Great Scot, what next?

Pennsylvania Commerce Secretary Norval Reece has decided that the Commonwealth simply can't get along without an office dedicated to pursuing all those dollars being tossed around by movie makers when shooting on location.

Reece has hired away a 21-year-old blonde from the Ohio Film Bureau, which pursues the cinematic buck for that state, to run the show in Harrisburg.

With the problems plaguing the Commonwealth, we wonder how Reece could have found the time to work up this project and fund and staff it? It couldn't have been easy, because there hasn't been anywhere near enough time to reverse the industrial drain that is increasing unemployment in Pennsylvania. That is Reece's job, you know.

He recognizes that, we suppose. Otherwise he wouldn't have painted the pie-in-the-sky picture of what this film commission is going to do for the state's economy. Should the commonwealth's "filmbait" — her name is Michele Kuhar, by the way, and she's on the payroll for $17,800 a year (we assume she can type) — persuades movie companies to spend as much as $50 million a year to shoot films here, that would mean 5,000 jobs. So Reece says.

Of course, they'll be, let us say, odd jobs of a temporary nature. That ought to do wonders for the thousands of skilled laborers and craftsmen who are out of work. Sort of like the Roman bread and circuses.

Well, it's possible to get too snide and negative about Reece's little brainstorm. A general factotum like Ms. Kuhar can spend more time pandering to filmdom's well-known quirks and just might be able to persuade some producers to bring their filming crews to Pennsylvania. And no question about money — the motion picture industry does spend loads of it. Much of that could wind up in local hands, and any infusion of capital is helpful, whether times are tough or not.

But we'd certainly like to see such imaginative approaches taken with respect to the problems of the industry drain. Reece's little project is cute and all that, but where is the heavy industry that forms the base of economic vitality? That's what we want to hear announcements about. And we've been waiting a long time.

Does anyone have good words for President Carter?

Roscoe Drummond

WASHINGTON — Right now President Carter is the target of a veritable hailstorm of media criticism — by newspaper columnists, editorial writers and TV commentators.

When criticism gets this strident, it can mean only one of two things: Either the President is worse off than he thinks, or the critics are playing follow-the-leader when one big blast brings a whole chain reaction of denunciations, each one almost like the others.

Some of the epithets picked at random from a spate of hostile articles include "inept," "incompetent," "provincial," "inexperienced," "arrogant," "stubborn," "morally blind." And that's just a starter.

There is no doubt that Mr. Carter is going through a very bad patch, in part because the Democratic Senate is determined to shift the balance of political power from the President to Congress.

Another reason for the President's troubles is that from the date he took office he has been dealing with the same intractable problems faced by his immediate predecessors in the White House who made even less headway than Carter is making.

House — afire

I don't mean that Jimmy Carter has been any house-afire. He hasn't. He proclaimed that he was an "outsider" to Washington, and he has been proving it. For one as bright as Mr. Carter, he has taken a long time to learn how to work with Congress — if Congress really wants to work with any President these days. Many would agree that he has put too many balls in the air with the result that too many have dropped to the floor.

He could use a couple of independent, high-level advisers with experience and background outside the borders of the state of Georgia. He clearly needs a chief of staff in the White House to take some of the burden of co-ordinating the Administration so that the President can have more time to think.

But these current, monolithic assaults are premature and will, I believe, prove so before long.

The legislative box score will look a lot better in another few months. There was no energy program whatsoever under Nixon and Ford. The President is bringing negotiations for a Middle East settlement nearer than did his predecessors. Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy bought time but it did not advance substantial negotiations. Nixon and Ford tried to reach a new SALT agreement with Moscow, but failed. It is within reach today.

But the extremist critics go beyond criticism. They get into prediction. A whole handful of them, both conservative and liberal columnists, are now talking about Carter as a one-term President — and he is only nine months into his first term. Surely, predicting Carter's political demise at this point goes beyond reasonable judgment, despite the fact that the Harris poll shows the President's approval rating slightly below 50 per cent (Gallup shows him at 59 per cent.)

Among the most changeable things in life is a politician's rating in the polls. The pollsters are still haunted by the fact that their surveys, on the eve of his re-election, consigned Harry Truman to the politically defunct with a "popularity" drop of 23 per cent. He won. Remember? Tom Dewey does.

Radicals in the woods

Nicholas Von Hoffman

WASHINGTON — They were the vanguard of an army that never formed. These were the hip radicals of seven or eight years ago who dropped out of the line of the anti-war march and curved away for Mendacino in northern California, for Vermont and for other not only rural, but rugged places.

A number of the first arrivals have held on these past years, bunched in their improbable retreats, not even the object of where-are-they-now type media attention. But a report from Jacqueline Mitchell, a counter-culturist, a self-exile from Reno, Nevada, to coastal Maine, tells us what happened to those who had the once well publicized dream of establishing a different way of life.

Beginning to wonder

"We are just beginning to notice that we are well into our 30s. And rather than being the heralds of a new lifestyle to which clusters of bright, post-industrial apprentices are drawn, we seem to be a social phenomenon peculiar to our own generation," she writes in the October issue of Maine magazine. "Our children — the Lamaze babies born to the Original Hippies and the Original Activists— are just now entering their adolescence and we're wondering if the whole earth assumptions will apply to their futures any better than those we inherited from our parents."

The most successful or at least longest-lived forms of counter-cultural utopianism in the American past — not counting the Pilgrims themselves — were the groups like the Amish, the Mormons and the Shakers who developed an economic base which allowed them the material minimum necessary to live their creeds.

These practitioners of Country Cool, as Mitchell calls it, came with few ways of sustaining themselves. "Some have become skilled crafters eking out scant livelihoods. A few have joined the ivy-league professionals who out-compete local bureaucrats for administrative salaries in Maine's internal 'human services,' " writes Mitchell, who arrived in 1971 with her husband and two daughters, now seven and 10. At first the family survived on her $230 a month teaching fellowship; then for awhile there were VISTA jobs. "What we did was to learn to write grants and create salaries," she says.

Many of these folks shared with the more rightwardly inclined a manful desire to escape the scaffolding of big organizational society, so it must be with a sympathetic wistfulness that we read, "After a decade of oddjobbing, mostly in the social services subsidized by federal funding, we are now beginning to square off with having to earn a living just like everybody else . . . nor will our relative poverty stop being a nervous irritant as the '70s move us inextricably towards the vulnerabilities of our middle lives and away from the immunities of our early lives."

Some will read these words and say that they show what a generous, fat-hearted people we are; we take care of everybody; the taxpayers are even supporting those former youths who used to urinate on the steps of federal courthouses. Meathead largesse, maybe, but it has worked out better, it would seem, than in West Germany where yesterday's radical politics is today's profitless outlawry. Our way is not conducive of the great things these people once intimated they might do, but surely it's more humane. It does perhaps take their dignity to pension them off with small stipends for running rural literacy programs, or battered children programs, or rape crisis programs or any of those other dozen and one vaguely radical sounding, wholesomely innocuous enterprises.

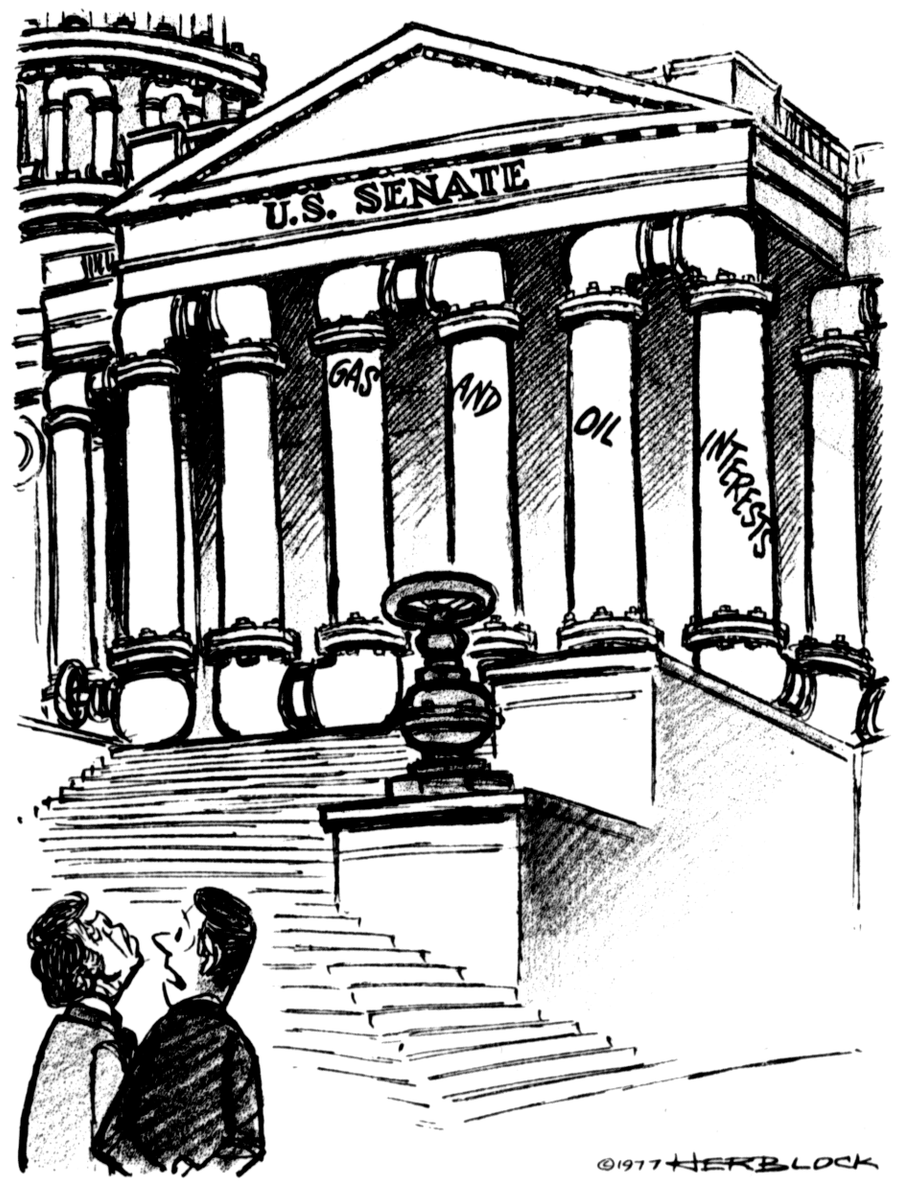

On the payroll

From aspiring to be the most independent, those of the group who don't have private incomes or haven't developed small-craft business skills have ended being the most dependent. Not parlor radicals but welfare radicals, in a country that has learned the most expeditiously effective way of dealing with a grouch is to put him on the payroll. Protect the dear person's civil liberties and soon even the wife or husband will stop listening.

The system is a universe, a complete closed circle. You can no more get out of the social galaxy than the astronomical one. There is no there out there, unless you want to count the black hole into which the Baader-Meinhof people vanished as a there.

For Americans who must always have a New Frontier it is disturbing that the circle of reality has been welded closed. We need frontiers, or we need to believe we have frontiers, the last frontier, the new one, the frontiers of science, medicine, communications, technology, sports and leisure. Earlier epochs in Western civilization would have considered all these frontiers of new probability enemies to art or science or imagination.

So it's not only the original activists off in the Maine woods who can say with Mitchell, "We debate over wine about spontaneity being the real source of the creative imagination, but we find that what was once spontaneous often becomes ritualized and that in the pursuit of impulse, we may become stylized and predictable."

On getting a job

Sylvia Porter

An enormous, rarely duplicated net total of 3 million workers will have entered the job market by yearend 1977 — despite retirements, mortalities, firings and a defiantly stubborn unemployment rate of more than 7 per cent.

The greatest proportion of these will be young people graduating from college and high school; a full million adult women will have returned to the work force after dropping out to devote some years to being homemakers and having babies.

Yet, this remains a painfully indifferent, if not antagonistic job market to so many, that a well-planned search for employment is more vital than ever. Where, therefore, can you find out more about the kinds of jobs you are qualified to hold? How do you write a resume and a letter of appication that will convince an employer you are the right person for a job? Where do you go for information on job opportunities in your field? Here are key guides:

(1) Self appraisal. Take an inventory of your qualifications, background and experience, so that you know exactly what assets you have to offer an employer. Prepare a chart including all the data that could be helpful and that emphasizes your best assets. On this chart write your work history (a list of all your jobs); your skills and abilities (personal qualities that make you good at certain work); education (schools, dates attended, major courses); your interests, talents, aptitudes.

Also, are you physically qualified for the target job? Do you have to change your field of work? How long can you afford to be out of work?

What is your career goal? Now, five or 10 years from now? List the jobs you feel best qualified to handle in order of preference.

(2) Prepare your resume — whether you're applying for a clerical or sales position or a professional or managerial job. Have it typewritten, with enough copies duplicated for your anticipated needs. Never pass out carbon copies!

Your resume should consist of personal date (name, address and phone number); employment objective (job you seek); work history (by job, most recent and working backward with dates of employment, names and addresses of employers, positions you held and specific duties you had); scope of responsibility and accomplishments; education and military experience, if any. Include, too, such important miscellaneous items as knowledge of foreign languages, volunteer activities, special skills (typing, shorthand, membership in professional organizations). Supply references (names, addresses and positions of three persons who know your work competence). If you are a recent graduate, list teachers familiar with your work. Get references' okay.

Letter of application

(3) Prepare letter of application to go with resume and to ask for interview when answering a help wanted ad or applying for an out-of-town position. Be concise; type neatly on good grade lettersize white bond paper and address letter to a specific person.

(4) Study in advance for the job interview. Assemble in order all papers you will need: your resume, samples of your work, the like. Find out about the company. Learn the prevailing salary scale for the type of job you seek. Dress conservatively. Avoid dogmatic statements during the interview; don't ask questions unless invited; don't criticize your former employer; don't discuss personal, domestic or financial problems unless asked. If the employer introduces the subject, be ready to state the salary you want. Ask when you may phone to learn the decision on your employment. Thank the interviewer.

If a test is required and it has been a long time since you have taken tests, don't be apprehensive. Your score will be considered only one measure of your qualifications.

(5) Make your job-hunting a full-time project and don't take off on mini-vacations. Apply early in the day to allow for multiple interviews, tests or other procedures. Be on time for appointments. Follow up leads immediately.

After the interview, conduct a frank review of yourself. Did you present your qualifications well? Talk too much? Too little? Did you pass up clues on how to sell yourself? Were you too aggressive? Too weak? How can you improve the next interview?

Lobbying for treaties

Jack Anderson
With LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Panamanian Ambassador Gabriel Lewis has just concluded a quick correspondence course on how to win friends on Capitol Hill and influence their votes on the Panama Canal treaties.

He was instructed confidentially to court senators at "breakfast, lunch and dinner," to buy "a meal or two" for hungry reporters, to pass out contributions to the right senators and, above all, not to count on President Carter's inept lobbyists.

Ambassador Lewis sought the advice of a professional persuader, N.C. Livingstone, on what he could do to help persuade the Senate to ratify the Panama Canal treaty. The ambassador got back a candid, five-page memo on the letterhead of Hill, Livingstone Associates, a Washington consulting firm.

Livingstone cautioned that the White House lobbyists, headed by the harassed Frank Moore, were babes in the legislative woods. "Few members of Frank Moore's congressional liaison staff at the White House have any real credibility or demonstrable expertise on Capitol Hill," Livingstone tipped off the ambassador. "To trust the White House to win ratification of the treaties is to take a severe risk."

Instead, the memo advised the Panamanians to "concentrate on good, old-fashioned flesh-pressing and shoe-leather diplomacy." Explained the memo: "Build personal ties and rapport with members of the Senate and their staffs. Court them at breakfast, lunch and dinner." In a sentence, Livingstone urged: "Live at the U.S. Senate for the next six months."

Another section of the memo, entitled "Persuasion by Contribution," offered this confidential advice: "Next year is an election year. Perhaps a dozen members of the Senate could be influenced by the promise of contributions or the threat to withhold such contributions. Prominent business and labor leaders could provide such pressure on key undecided members."

Perhaps as an afterthought about the Korean scandal, Livingstone added cautiously: "This is, to be sure, a sensitive matter, but it is in no way unusual in U.S. politics."

The memo included some instructions for manipulating the media. First, it recommended that the Panamanians "forget about the Washington Post and the New York Times." These eminent newspapers, explained Livingstone, "are already on your side."

Instead, he suggested that they concentrate on smaller papers whose Washington correspondents, he said, are often slighted. "Invite them personally to the embassy, grant them interviews, buy them a meal or two," he advised. Stressed the memo: "Most journalists from the smaller publications don't often get invitations of this kind."

As another effective tactic, Livingstone recommended that the Panamanians generate grass-roots pressure. This could be accomplished, he said, by recruiting businessmen and labor leaders to contact senators personally, by establishing close contacts with "key opinion-generators in each state" and by creating a citizens committee of "prominent Americans."

The committee, he suggested, should be "used as a vehicle to take out newspaper ads countering those placed in local newspapers by treaty opponents." He also had some advice on the advertising style: "The ads should be full-page, concise, attractive and composed with snappy journalism; no long-winded expositions."

Footnote: Livingstone told us he wrote the memo as a personal favor. "I haven't received a dime," he said, for his political primer. It was inadvertent, he explained, that the advice was written on his firm's stationery.

Unsung Writer: The conflict in South Africa between the white regime and the black race, between the authorities and the press, has exploded into the open. Out of the repression has risen a host of black heroes. Not the least of them is the martyred Steve Biko who died mysteriously in jail. Black newsmen have also been systematically harassed and suppressed.

But a white man, Donald Woods, is also a victim of the South African police state. For more than two decades, this courageous editor has fought for civil liberties in South Africa. He is now under virtual house arrest — banned from speaking to reporters or even issuing written statements.

His crime? He wrote a column called "My Friend Steve Biko."

Gun Mail: The most militant of the gun groups, the Citizen's Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms, may have gone too far. It has sent out mail in the names of congressmen who never authorized it.

Two congressmen whose names were misused, Bob Walker and Bill Goodling, both Pennsylvania Republicans, are considering legal action against the committee. Walker has also complained to the Postal Service.

The gun group fired a shotgun blast of 600,000 letters across the country soliciting money. The envelopes bear the committee's name and trademark in large type. But in the address window, just above the recipient's address, is the statement that the letter is "from" a congressman.

The group's founder, promoter and executive director, Alan Gottlieb, was hot-tempered about the matter. He shouted; he threatened; he screamed. It was "an error by the mail house," he swore. Only one of the 600,000 letters misused a congressman's name, insisted Gottlieb. "Anyone who tells me anything different," he yelled, "is a liar."

Butera calls for tougher collective bargaining law

HARRISBURG (UPI) — House Minority Leader Robert Butera said Tuesday Pennsylvania's collective bargaining laws should be changed to bar teachers and other state employees from striking.

Butera, R-Montgomery, a candidate for governor, said Act 195, the state law that gives bargaining rights to public employees, makes Pennsylvania "one of the most generous employers on the face of the Earth.

"What the public perceives about the current system is a scheme involving greedy public employees, pliable and cowardly politicians and an unprotected taxpayer. To a large degree, that perception is accurate," said Butera.

Butera, in testimony before the Governor's Study Commission on Public Employee Relations, proposed that a court be empowered to order "final offer" arbitration to resolve deadlocked labor disputes.

Taxpayers have been forced to pay unreasonably high salaries since the enactment of Act 195 in 1970 because of the political muscle of state employees' unions, Butera said.

He said the "right-to-strike" has encouraged numerous and lengthy strikes by public employees and resulted in job security and fringe benefits unmatched in the private sector.

Butera also said the state legislature should be given the right of final approval of all contracts with state employees.

He believed that his proposals would be difficult to implement because of the political clout of unions including the Pennsylvania State Education Association, the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Butera was supported by Sen. George Gekas, R-Dauphin, in his proposal to give the General Assembly final approval of contracts with state employees. But commission member Richard Kirchner said he was skeptical of the idea.

"The General Assembly was not concerned about the welfare of the general public or of public employees during the budget crisis which it subjected every person in this Commonwealth to last summer," he said.

"You are suggesting we compound that problem by involving the members of the General Assembly in the bargaining process."

Sen. Frankin Kury, D-Northumberland, told the commission he agreed that Act 195 was not working well — but he stopped short of barring strikes. He said teachers should be docked pay when they go on strike.

Unlike other labor union members, teachers are currently assured full pay even if they strike because the state requires school districts to conduct classes 180 days, Kury said.

Kury said that since 1970, there have been 361 teachers' strikes in Pennsylvania, or one-third of the total in the entire United States during that period.

Halloween not all fun, games

By United Press International

Halloween was not all fun and games in Pennsylvania.

Classes were canceled Tuesday in the Cecil Township area schools of Washington County because vandals slashed 17 school bus tires.

Al DeLucia, acting school superintendent of Canon-McMillian School District, said the vandals broke into the bus park area Monday night and damaged the tires.

In another Halloween night incident, some 2,000 customers of West Penn Power Co. in Pittsburgh's South Hills district were plunged into darkness when vandals climbed a pole at the Bethel Park substation, hit the air switch and broke it.

West Penn spokesman Bob Van Atta said it took two hours to restore power.

In Morrisdale, Clearfield County, Moris-Cooper Township police reported a young girl trick-or-treating was given an apple in which a razor blade was inserted. The girl was not injured.

State police in Conneautville, Crawford County, said Alan Timko, 33, Albion, was riding a motorcycle on Route 18 north of Conneautville when the ghost sheet he was wearing went over his face, causing his motorcycle to crash into a pole. He was treated for minor injuries.

Grove City volunteer firemen were called out twice to extinguish burning leaves.

Philadelphia police said at least two children in northeast Philadelphia received unidentified pills in their trick-or-treat bags. The pills are being analyzed.

Police also are investigating reports of razor blades and a nail being hidden in Halloween apples in southwest and south Philadelphia. There were no reports of injuries.

In Pittsburgh, police reported two girls were given popcorn balls with matches in them; another girl received an apple containing a razor blade, and a youth had "dog litter" deposited in his trick-or-treat bag.

Power companies rap new plan for energy cost rate

HARRISBURG (UPI) — A spokesman for the state's major electric companies says the Public Utility Commission's adoption of a new energy cost rate is going to anger Pennsylvania consumers next April.

"When people find out that the energy cost rate charges on their electric bills are sharply higher than their fuel adjustment charges were, it's going to be horrible," said Frank Montgomery.

"And when utilities have to ask the PUC to approve a sharply higher percentage rate increase — because the PUC has shrunk our base rate — then the consumers will be literally furious."

Montgomery, vice president and managing director of the Pennsylvania Electric Association, made his predictions Tuesday at a meeting of the PUC's Utility Technical Advisory Council.

He told UTAC, headed by Bell Telephone Vice President Ian Robinson, that "there is no one in the world who believes fuel costs are going down, or are standing still. They're going up.

"And the PUC plans to take the $250 million in Pennsylvania utilities' partial energy costs out of the base rate, add it to the $750 million now in the fuel adjustment charge and call it the energy cost rate is deceiving.

"Not only will the billing figures come as a shock, they'll convince consumers that utilities are ripping them off," Montgomery said.

The PEA executive said news reports on the PUC plan misled consumers by causing them to believe they will get the same monthly electric billing under the energy cost rate plan.

"The plan simply guarantees the same rate per kilowatt hour for 12 months," Montgomery said, "and the billing will fluctuate monthly with use as it does now."

Montgomery said Pennsylvania's eight biggest electric utilities have sharply higher customer delinquencies this year than last.

"On Oct. 1, 1976, the eight biggest power companies had 453,404 delinquent accounts representing unpaid bills of $16.8 million.

"On Oct. 1, 1977," Montgomery said, "they had 484,068 delinquent accounts worth $27 million in unpaid bills."

PEA President Brooke Hartman told a joint luncheon meeting of UTAC and the PUC Consumer Advisory Council that "the electric bill for a typical large industrial customer rose 230 per cent from 1970 to 1977.

"In that same period," Hartman said, "the electric bill for a typical residential customer rose 101 per cent."

The Consumer Council Tuesday elected Joan Ghiselin, Reading, as chairperson.

Philly hotel sold for $7.5 million

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The 20-year-old Philadelphia Sheraton, the premier hotel in the city center, has been sold to a local real estate developer for $7.5 million.

The 864-room hotel, a major convention center since its construction, will retain its name and continue to be managed by the Sheraton company under a management agreement.

"To change the name would be suicide," said George H. Johnson, president of Albert M. Greenfield who negotiated the deal that took nearly one year to conclude.

Joseph B. Simon, president of Simon Associates of Bala Cynwyd, said he purchased the hotel because of his faith in Philadelphia's downtown area.

"We believe the downtown area has a great future. We think there's a renaissance," he said.

He said the Sheraton, with its five dining areas and 40,000 square feet of meeting and convention space, was the heart of Philadelphia.

"It is quite evident that we have considerable faith in downtown Philadelphia."

Sloppy sportswear replaces folklore in spring fashion

LAYERS AND LAYERS — Designer Sonia Rykiel showed tunic dresses with drawstring hemlines over short wide trousers which went over longer skinny trousers. Still more layers were added with a droppy jacket and scarf. (UPI)

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — And now — sex and the baggy layered look.

That's the main message of the Paris spring-summer ready-to-wear shows staged during the past two weeks by more than 1,000 fashion houses in private shows and at the Porte de Versailles exhibition hall to thousands of international buyers and press.

The folklore frenzy that Yves Saint Laurent launched two years ago virtually faded out of the shows. Saint Laurent completely dumped his Russian-Chinese-Moroccan extravaganza. Emanuel Ungaro gave up his Tibet look and the Lanvin salon eliminated most of its peasant garb.

The oversized look that has drowned females in fabric for two years remained and the new spring clothes looked sloppier than ever. Dresses drooped over shirred waistbands, sleeves were leg-o-mutton or oversized footballs. Skirts were so full and gathered that the wearer would have to enter a door sideways and dresses often were wide enough for two.

What is new in the sloppy look is that it is very sporty.

Saint Laurent, the most influential designer in Paris, as usual led the way. For two years he showed opulent peasant garb to opera music. But last week he stunned the fashion world by springing a new sporty look of cotton poplin blousons, baseball jackets, rolled-up cuffed pants, standup collar shirts, fatigue pants, jogging pants, etc.

That casual look permeated other shows. Conventional coats all but disappeared, as did hats and real suits.

To add to the bulk, Paris layered, relayered and then overlayered. With a gleam in the eye about how nice it would be to make women buy more than one item, the designers showed dresses flopping over trousers or long or knee-length bloomers. There were dresses over dresses and skirts over dresses and sleeveless vests over longer tunics and sometimes jackets over both.

Sonia Rykiel outdid her colleagues by displaying the first two-trouser outfit of the century — wide short pants over long skinny pants. How all these layers of clothes will keep a female cool next summer was a puzzle.

Sex reared its head in the collections. When they run out of other ideas, designers long have made gowns slit to the knee, minis, backless and strapless dresses.

Saint Laurent a half dozen years ago gave the see-through blouse to the world to keep up with changing mores.

This season buyers dozing in their seats in the overheated showrooms were startled to see evening gowns that were seethrough fore and aft, up and down. The rag trade instantly coined a word for these outfits: body veils.

Designer Karl Lagerfeld at the Chloe firm paraded body veils as well as more demure short dresses with transparent long overskirts to show the legs. Other transparent slim black dresses had a band here and there to make them legal.

Sonia Rykiel did away with see-through blouses and had her girls walking around topless except for open vests or shirts. Even the tasteful house of Chanel joined the nudity race with transparent white and floral-printed full gowns.

At least the mannequins at the aforementioned shows wore panties.

But the Saint Laurent mannequins did not, their white ruffled transparent gowns proving that Paris now has nothing more to hide.

How do the designers want ordinary women to wear those gowns? One Chanel official said, "Well, they could wear body stockings underneath."

Another trend of the spring collections was pants. There were more pants than skirts, from mini-shorts and Bermuda shorts to knee-length ruffled pants under skirts, Turkish draped pants, ankle-length bloomers.

Trousers were more narrow, tapering at the ankle and having hip fullness to follow the trend for ampleness. Saint Laurent's were high-waisted. Kenzo Takada of the Jungle Jap firm showed pirate trousers, very gathered and wide at the hips, to go with pirate eyepatches and head kerchiefs.

The big fabric of the collections was cotton: crinkly Indian cotton, cotton sailcloth, cotton canvas, cotton poplin, cotton jacquards (patterned) and cotton gauze. There were some stripes and floral prints but less prints than usual.

In the color department, the smash color was khaki. So many Saint Laurent blousons and pants and blousy dresses were of khaki that his runway looked like an army surplus store. In fact, he announced that his show was inspired by the garb he saw on the streets of New York.

Lagerfeld joined the khaki craze with tight-over-the-hips dresses with matching coverups.

SLOPPY SPORTSWEAR — After two years of featuring the Russian-Chinese look, leading designer Yves Saint Laurent has turned his attention to sportswear where he's layered a jacket with skinny waist tie over a blouse and trousers with turned-up hems. (UPI)

During art show hours

Public to view McCarthy collection

STROUDSBURG — Visitors to the "Arts and Artichokes III" art show to be held from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday at Pocono Produce will find a bonus.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward K. Driebe will exhibit their private collection of over 60 paintings by the late Justin McCarthy.

The McCarthy collection is not part of the art show but will be open to the public at the same time in another part of the Pocono Produce building.

Driebe has one of the largest, most representative private collections of McCarthy's works in Monroe County, according to the Monroe County Arts Council, sponsor of "Art and Artichokes III."

The primitive or folk art of McCarthy (1892-1977) is in the permanent collection of the Brooklyn Museum, the Everhart Museum in Scranton, the Abbey Rockefeller Collection of American Folk Art in Williamsburg, Va., and the folk art collection of Herbert W. Hemphill Jr., former director of the Museum of American Folk Art.

Some controversy exists in the evaluation of contemporary folk art, with some art critics questioning if modern folk art should be considered genuine.

The son of a Hazelton newspaper executive, McCarthy was born in Weatherly. He attended the University of Pennsylvania Law School but failed to pass the bar examination.

For the next 20 years he raised and sold vegetables.

Deeply struck by impressions gathered at the Louvre in Paris while visiting his aunt in 1907, he began to paint in 1920.

He continued without encouragement or recognition until 1960 when Sterling and Dorothy Strauser of Stroudsburg urged him to exhibit in local outdoor shows.

Local and regional appreciation came quickly. McCarthy won the Wyckoff Award in 1966. The Museum of Modern Art in New York included his works in its 1967 traveling exhibition.

He had numerous one-man shows, including the Peale House Gallery in Philadelphia in 1972.

At the time of the Peale House exhibition, McCarthy was 80-years-old and was escorted from Weatherly to Philadelphia by the committee in charge to a banquet given in his honor by the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts.

Susan C. Miller

Miller-Catino

SAYLORSBURG — Mr. and Mrs. Lee A. Miller Sr. of Saylorsburg announce the engagement of their daughter, Susan Cynthia, to Ernest Charles Catino, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Catino of Pen Argyl.

The bride-elect attended Nazareth Senior High School and is employed by Star Manufacturing, Pen Argyl.

Her fiance is a graduate of Bangor Senior High School and is employed by Joseph Catino and Son Excavating, Contracter Nazareth.

A wedding is planned for Oct. 7, 1978.

Making new friends easier by moving in school year

STROUDSBURG — Children need special care on moving day.

For children leaving school, favorite friends and familiar surroundings, the day can often-times be an unhappy one.

One of the best ways fo parents to turn this potentially upsetting experience into one filled with promise and adventure is to move in winter, when school is in session.

That's the advice of the moving professionals of Aero Mayflower Transit Company.

Children have the opportunity to make new friends quickly and easily then, thereby helping to ease the separation from former neighbors.

There's nothing worse for a child than to move into a new home in the summer and find his new playmates in summer camps or on long vacations.

Christmas and New Year's parties are additional opportunities for children to develop friendships.

Moving can be an adventure for children if their parents get them involved as soon as possible.

Don't keep the move a secret, say the Mayflower moving counselors. Take the children to their new home if it's nearby. If not, pictures of the house will do just fine.

Start by showing or telling the children about their rooms. Maybe a child will be getting his or her own room for the first time and if so, it will be a big selling point.

Take a tour of the neighborhood. Point out baseball fields, swimming pools and other recreational facilities. You may also want to take the children to their favorite fast food restaurants.

A visit to the children's new school before they enroll will be helpful in easing those first day jitters. If possible, introduce them to their new teachers.

Encourage children to keep in touch with their former friends. Getting addresses and pictures of old playments can be fun. And every child likes to tell of new experiences.

As moving day approaches, let the children pack their prized possessions and tag the boxes with special stickers that say "Load last, unload first."

That way, the children's special belongings are taken off first. They can be busy unpacking, leaving parents free to direct the movers.

Don't send children to a relative's house on moving day, Mayflower points out.

Just like adults, they need to make sure all their belongings are loaded on the moving van and arrive safely at the new house.

A new toy or piece of furniture waiting for the child at his or her new home is another good way to ease the pain of transition.

Enough turkeys for feasts

STROUDSBURG — The supply of turkeys for November, a time when the birds are popular dinner fare, should be adequate to meet consumers' needs.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) in its food marketing alert for November predicts that the supply of turkeys will be slightly above both last November's level and the three-year average for the month.

The department considers plentiful to mean more than enough to meet needs while adequate supplies are enough for requirements and light is not enough for normal needs.

Expected to be in plentiful supply during the month are beef, pork and broiler-fryers. The department reports that supplies of beef are down slightly from last November's record because of a continuing smaller output of grass-fed beef.

Eggs are expected to be in adequate supply during November.

In the dairy case foods should be plentiful, the department predicts. Although milk production will be at or near its seasonal low, it will be well above the November, 1976, and November, 1974-76, average.

Heavy fall milk production coupled with large commercial stocks of manufactured dairy products are expected to result in very large supplies of butter, cheese and nonfat dry milk.

Preliminary figures for September indicate that butter production was about 20 per cent above September 1976 level and about 21 per cent above the month's three-year average.

Nonfat dry milk production in August was 32 per cent above last year and 24 per cent above the three-year monthly average.

Fresh grapefruit are expected to be plentiful along with fresh tangerines and tangelos. The USDA expects that oranges will be in adequate supply while frozen orange juice concentrate will be in light supply.

Also plentiful this month should be cranberries, fresh apples, pears and grapes.

Good news for raisin lovers is that raisins should be plentiful after being in light supply for months. The USDA reports that the 1977 production is substantially above last year's crop.

Most processed vegetables should be in adequate supply with some items bring plentiful, such as canned tomatoes and tomato products, canned beets and sweet corn.

Also expected to be plentiful are frozen broccoli and corn-on-the-cob.

Potatoes should be plentiful as should onions. Sweet potatoes should be in adequate supply. Also expected to be plentiful are peanuts, almonds and walnuts.

Ann Landers

Double trouble

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I decided that maybe you can help us. I am writing because she has been crying and her eyes are too swollen to see.

Last year our beautiful, intelligent daughter married a jerk. She had so many great guys running after her we can't figure out why she picked this loser. But that's over and done with. Now the current problem: Her younger sister has become romantically involved with the idiot's brother. He may be an even bigger jerk. At least the other one had four years of college. This clown quit after one year and is still trying to "find himself."

One character out of that family is enough. What can we do to discourage our second daughter from making this awful mistake? —

Pittsburgh

Dear Pitts: If you want to make sure both daughters have the same in-laws, just continue to knock the kid. Nothing makes a fellow quite so attractive to a girl as having to defend him against her parents.

Look hard and try to find something about the young man to admire. Then — dwell on it. You'll be amazed at the change in her attitude when you change yours.

Dear Ann Landers: There was a big discussion at our house last night about drunken behavior — also a lot of divided opinion. Will you please check with the authorities and give me the straight dope?

When people have had too much to drink do their true feelings come out? Or, do they say and do things that are uncharacteristic of the real person?

My uncle, for example, is a rather reserved man who usually keeps to himself. When he has had one too many (like a third martini) he becomes very talkative and even affectionate. (Actually, he is much more likeable when he's loaded.)

My aunt, on the other hand, is a lovely, pleasant, refined lady when she's sober, but when she drinks she becomes belligerent, nasty and downright mean.

What is the story on such behavior, Ann? —

Like To Know

Dear Like: Alcohol breaks down the inhibitions. When the booze goes to work the "censoring agent" takes a vacation.

Inebriated people say what is truly on their minds. Buried resentments surface. The language is unguarded. The behavior you see is the real person.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been happily married for two years. His son (now age 17) by his former marriage lives with his mother in a city about 40 miles from us. Johnny and I have always gotten along well — no problem. Although I see plenty of room for improvement, I have never once criticized him — either to his father or anyone else. We have let him know he is welcome to spend weekends with us but he has never shown much interest in doing so.

Johnny has a key to our home and this is what I'm writing about. Last week a neighbor told me that when my husband and I were in Wisconsin the boy and a pretty young girl and another couple spent the night at our place. This neighbor is not a gossip. Should I tell my husband? After all, I'm not the boy's mother. —

Don't Want Trouble

Dear D. W.T.: You may not be the boy's mother but the home is half yours and you should not supply a 17-year-old with such a cozy and convenient setup.

Tell your husband. He should ask Johnny to return the key but make it clear that he and his friends are welcome anytime — when you're at home.

The TU-144, the Soviet Union's answer to the Concorde, takes off Tuesday from Moscow. (UPI)

Soviet jetliner's trip noisy, but smooth

'Consordski' has inaugural flight

ALMA ATA, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — Russia's "Concordski" supersonic jetliner made its caviar and cognac inaugural run Tuesday with a smooth but noisy flight in which passengers had to shout to be heard but which its designer said was only like "nature itself."

With a deafening roar, the droop-nosed TU-144 aircraft thundered down Moscow's Domodedovo Airport runway for a liftoff at 9:01 a.m. (1:01 a.m. edt).

From standstill to airborne took only 33 seconds.

The planes 80 passengers, which included designer Alexei Tupolev, were thrust firmly back in their powder-blue seats as the aircraft made a steep climb to the cruising altitude of 10 miles. It broke the sound barrier in slightly over 20 minutes.

The TU144, which features a curious single stabilizing wing on the front of the plane, covered the 2,050 miles from Moscow to Alma Ata, in Soviet Central Asia, in one minute over two hours at speeds of over 1,430 miles an hour.

It returned at midafternoon to Moscow, easing down for a gentle approach and landing despite heavy, dark rain clouds.

The inaugural flight was smooth throughout, but continually plagued by roaring engines and whistling ventilation ducts that forced passengers to shout to make themselves heard.

Designer Tupolev acknowledged the noise problem, but said it was inevitable with supersonic flight.

"The sonic boom is no different than a thunderclap — so it is no different than nature itself," he told an airport news conference.

He said the high noise level was caused by the planes four huge jet engines and by an air ventilation system needed to cool the 248-degree temperatures on the planes outside titanium skin.

"We are looking into the problem," Tupolev said. "We need very strong ventilation with lots of air moving."

Hundreds of people greeted the plane on its arrival in the fruit-growing region of Kazakhstan. Young Pioneers, dressed in their white blouses with red scarves, handed each passenger red and white carnations as they stepped from the aircraft.

During the flight, three Aeroflot hostesses dispensed cognac, wine, caviar and roast beef from serving carts which could barely negotiate the tiny aisle.

U.S. envoy denounces Red charges

PARIS (UPI) — U.S. diplomat Constantine Warvariv Tuesday denounced as "without a jot of truth" Soviet accusations that he collaborated with German invaders of Russia in World War II. He said his family had opposed the Nazis.

"The accusations against me or any members of my family are absolutely unfounded and without a jot of truth," said Warvariv by telephone from a sick bed.

Warvariv said he has no way of knowing whether historic Soviet hatred of Ukrainian nationalists played any part in the accusations. He said that in any case, "My father, though he sympathized with the Ukrainian patriots, preached love and understanding.

"My father was not a member of any political movement. And I of course was just a child."

The Soviets now have named Warvariv's father, his brothers Yuri and Yevgeny and his wife's father and sister Galina as collaborators with the Nazi invaders of the Ukraine.

U.S. calls Soviets' bluff on issue of human rights

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — The United States, ignoring a Soviet warning that the human rights issue could "break up" the Belgrade conference, criticized political repression in Eastern Europe Tuesday. The Russians backed down.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg, citing the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, and Poland by name, also admitted human rights violations in the United States but said the Carter Administration is working to "eliminate injustices."

Soviet Ambassador Yuli Vorontsov had warned Western countries on Monday that "if these attacks continue, it could break up the conference."

But Goldberg Tuesday named the three Eastern European nations for violations of a provision in the Helsinki agreement calling on the nations of Europe to "respect human rights and fundamental freedoms, including the freedom of thought, conscience, religion or belief."

"It is difficult to agree that there is justification for the arrests and convictions of peaceful advocates whose trials appear related in large part to the question of the way the (Helsinki) Final Act is being implemented."

The former Supreme Court justice admitted that the United States has been guilty of some human rights violations, without going into detail.

"In spite of the blemishes on our record, the point is that governmental institutions in the United States are working to eliminate injustices rather than to deny them," he said.

Vorontsov replied, "The U.S. delegate has spoken about his own country. But when he gave examples of injustice, he no longer spoke about the United States, but about other countries where the situation is obviously less familiar to him."

Fighting fierce in desert war

KARA MARDA PASS, Occupied Ethiopia (UPI) — Ethiopian forces, backed by Cuban and Yemeni troops, are fighting Somali rebels for control of the mountain fortress of Harar in the fiercest battle of the Ogaden desert war.

The Ethiopians, their air power grounded by monsoon rains, have thrown the latest Soviet-made sophisticated weapons into the battle and have launched conterattacks against the rebels in the two-month-old fight for the town.

Jama Hassan, field commander of the Western Somali Liberation Front troops in the area, said specialists from Cuba and South Yemen are aiding the Ethiopians, primarily operating the sophisticated new Soviet weapons.

The Ethiopians, who have been receiving a steady supply of Soviet arms since they expelled U.S. military personnel in April, are fielding such strategic weapons as heavy T55 tanks, long-range 155mm artillery and truck mounted rocket artillery.

Strikers shut down Israel's port of Haifa

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israeli workers shut down the port of Haifa, struck factories and halted train service Tuesday to protest huge price and tax increases generated by the government's switch from socialism to a free market economy.

The Tel Aviv stock market reported stepped-up activity on its first working day since the weekend economic revolution but banks said there was only moderate demand for previously forbidden dollars and other foreign currencies.

Spokesmen for the giant Histadrut Labor Federation said the strikes, which first swept industrial plants in southern Israel Monday, idled 70,000 workers in the port city of Haifa and elsewhere in the north Tuesday.

Train service was canceled throughout the north and the labor officials predicted the walkouts would spread to the Tel Aviv region Wednesday.

The wave of protest demonstrations and strikes was called to back union demands for immediate compensation for price hikes expected to add up to 40 per cent inflation by the end of the year.

But Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich told reporters, "there is no room for wage increases this year."

Misses dad

GONE: (Q.) My dad just left four days ago, and I miss him so much. I cry over five times a day. I just can't stop thinking about him.

Everytime I see something of his on the clothes line, or when I see someone else's dad, I cry.

I just feel so sorry for my mom. Now we don't have a car.

My dad just called last night for the first time to tell us where he is. He told my mom he is going to come home some time when she isn't home and get the rest of his clothes. So I guess he isn't ever coming home again to stay.

I never thought he would leave. He loved me so much. Please help me. —

Almost 13 in Pennsylvania

(A.) Your father did not leave because he had stopped loving you. He left because he and your mother could not get along together.

You should be permitted to visit him regularly. Talk to your mother about this, and talk to him about it when he calls or comes by.

You and your mother will have to make many adjustments — more than just not having a car. The quicker you get to work adjusting to and accepting the way things are now, the quicker you can stop crying.

BEHIND: (Q.) I have a bad problem that has nothing to do with love or boys. I am 16 years old and I have failed two grades, the 1st and the 9th. I am supposed to be in the 11th.

I got real upset about failing the 9th so I asked my mom and dad what would they say if I was thinking about quitting school. My mom said, "Fine, if you find a job." My dad disapproved.

I haven't found me a job yet and am still in school. What's so bad about it is that I'll be 17 in December and I'll be sitting around with 14-15-year-olds.

Do you think it's dumb to be sitting around 14-15-year-olds in school? —

Troubled in South Carolina

(A.) I can understand that you are not too comfortable being in a class with younger students.

But I also know that a high school diploma is a very important thing for you to have, and it will mean much more to you in the future than a little discomfort in the present.

Stick it out. Stay in school.

Fear

Everyone has fears.

Fear of heights, fear of death, fear of failing, fear of flying (not to be confused with air travel).

I haven't told anyone about this, but my greatest fear is passing a camper on the highway.

The family doesn't even suspect this. Oh, they got a little suspicious once when I followed an Airstream caravan all the way to Tampa once without passing (we were headed to Ft. Lauderdale at the time), but no one said anything.

Because I have spent most of my time looking up the exhaust of campers, I have become quite an authority on them. To begin with, did you know that the average speed of a camper on a yellow line going uphill is 35 pmh? And 65 mph in a passing zone going downhill?

Did you know that many campers have bumper stickers proudly proclaiming, "Campers Are The Most Honest People in the World" and have their gas tank caps chained to the car? And a dog inside with eight-inch teeth?

Did you know that campers never pull over at scenic views? Never get gas? And have bionic kidneys?

I almost passed a camper once. I had been reading the back of their car for several hundred miles and knew them pretty well. Their names were Karl and Rita from Iowa, and they had been to the four western provinces of Canada, the Grand Canyon, Williamsburg, Crater Lake and Knotts Berry Farms.

They were anti gun control, wanted us to keep the Panama Canal, honk if we loved Jesus, and had voted down the school levy. I had followed them so long, at one point, I thought I saw Smokey the Bear's lips move.

"Why don't you try passing them?" suggested my husband gently.

"Are you saying I've been going too slow?"

"With luck, we'll make ten miles today."

My hands gripped the wheel as I eased out to pass their camper which was attached to a trailer carrying two motor bikes . . . which was attached to a small car being towed . . . which was attached to a boat which was being pulled by their station wagon.

What the heck. What was my hurry? We were only a few days from our destination.

Vitamins

Some of my friends at college are pill-poppers. They're health nuts. The pills are not meant to give them highs and lows. They all contain vitamins of one kind or another. Is it true that these vitamins can increase energy?

Miss C.V., Calif.

Dear Miss V.:

Vitamins are an excellent contribution in a well-balanced diet. Any normal diet usually contains sufficient vitamins and minerals to satisfy the body's needs.

Only in those specific instances when there is a known vitamin deficiency is there an essential need for supplemental vitamins.

For example, some health food regimes so limit the nutritional intake that vitamin and mineral supplements are mandatory. It is a misconception to believe that large doses of vitamins can increase pep and energy.

Fortunately, the body has a remarkable control system which eliminates unneeded and unused vitamins. Our sewer system is filled with the excretion of these expensive vitamins.

That same protective device does not apply to all vitamins. Unusually large doses of vitamin A and vitamin D are actually dangerous to health.

Dr. Jean Mayer, one of America's foremost authorities on nutrition, states in his excellent and sensible book, "A Diet for Living:" "Vitamin B12 is among the nutrients which have too often been given in massive doses, needlessly and without scientific reason. The only indication for injections of B12 is for a specific condition, pernicious anemia, where persons cannot properly use the B12 they consume."

You'll probably have a great deal of difficulty convincing the vitamin faddists that they're wasting their money. What you can do is to stay on a good nutritious diet and you will find that it will contain all the vitamins and minerals you need for health and pep.

To health faddists of all kinds I would like to recall the Scotsman's plea: "Please God, make me right; I'm always so positive."

Life-styles evident during holidays in museum shops

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Two trends in American life styles are especially apparent at holiday time in museum and library shops across the United States and Canada:

Insistence on quality and willingness to pay for it;

And the great ethnic renaissance.

Typical of both trends are:

A Japanese Edo pattern open stock dinner service in handpainted porcelain. A five-piece place setting is $40 at the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

A Pembroke gaming table, $1,830 at The Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

A mylar kite with a design taken from a 15th century Persian, Timurid astronomical manuscript, $25 at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

A smiling cat pendant adapted from a Peruvian textile, $45 at the Philadelphia museum.

An Appalachian dulcimer, $85 at the Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum in Nashville.

A working copy of a library ladder designed by Thomas Jefferson, $125 at the Alexandria, Va., Bicentennial Museum Shop.

"Product merchandising in museums has grown fantastically in the past 10 years," says Shelley Hodupp, vice president of the Museum Stores Assn.

Many have moved their shops out of closets and into the mainstream.

For every high-priced article there are dozens of inexpensive ones, Miss Hodupp said in an interview. She is executive manager for merchandising services at the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

"I think most shops started as information desks, handing out pamphlets and selling postcards of things in their collections. Ours began as a bookstore."

Mail order brochures and gift catalogs are commonplace now. They range from simple black and white folders to handsomely color-illustrated catalogs on good quality paper.

Miss Hodupp said income from gift sales is an important part of museum and library support, now that many federal government sources have cut back their contributions.

Shops also increase museum attendance, she said. Many attract new members by offering discounts on purchases as a fringe benefit of membership.

Standards of quality for merchandise are rigidly maintained by an association committee that screens dealers from whom its members buy.

Many examples of what you'll find this year are in "The Shopper's Guide to Museum Stores" (Universe $6.95 paper). Miss Hodupp compiled it from information and photos sent her by museums throughout the United States and Canada. In addition to describing and illustrating merchandise, she included a comprehensive list of institutions that sell by mail.

The catalog contains only commissioned original art works and merchandise produced by or for a museum from works in their own collections. Shops in individual museums also sell articles commissioned by or for their sister institutions.

Miss Hodupp said the articles she chose for the catalog were selected to illustrate the diversity of merchandise the shops handle.

"All items must be relevant to a museum's collections," she said.

The most popular categories include cookbooks, needlework, fashion totes, neckties and clothing — both ready-made and kits of precut fabric.

The range also extends to toys, games, books, prints, stationery, ornaments and objects, miniature furnishings and desk accessories.

Even retail stores are beginning to carry museum reproductions, she said. They buy from the institutions at wholesale prices.

Instead of competing for customers, one New York-based department store chain introduced Brooklyn Museum officials to a porcelain and glassware manufacturer when the museum was looking for someone to do a dinnerware service adapted from designs in its collections.

Horticulturist provides tips

Plants, people need humidity indoors

CHICAGO (UPI) — Walter Edens knows fall has returned when many houseplant owners start calling for advice about their ailing plants.

Edens is chief horticulturist for Lincoln Park Conservatory here. He says most popular houseplants, such as dieffenbachia, coleus and philodendron, need a 30-40 percent relative humidity level because they are tropical or semi-tropical in origin. Without it, they wilt.

People and furniture benefit from the same level, says humidifier expert Gregg Blankenship. But the colder it becomes outdoors, the lower the humidity drops indoors, sometimes as low as one to nine percent.

At that level, people's skin feels dry, furniture can become unglued and warp, plaster can crack, wallpaper peel and floors creak.

Edens and Blankenship, who is president of the industry organization, The Humidifier Institute, have some tips for coping with all these problems:

Both recommend using humidifiers, either portable or built into the house or apartment heating system.

In the case of plants, Edens says frequent waterings won't help because roots absorb water at an established rate. If the leaves are losing moisture faster because of dry air, the plant wilts, and the older, lower leaves drop.

Misting leaves with lukewarm water gives only temporary relief, he said, and it must be done several times daily.

The two or three gallons of humidity a day added by showers, cooking, laundering and other normal moistureproducing activities also are inadequate, Blankenship said.

The institute recommends 6.4 to 13.8 gallons daily for optimum humidity for a 1,500-square-foot house. The amount depends on how tightly the structure is built.

"Homes built before 1950 were not constructed as tightly as newer homes," Blankenship says.

He said the ideal is a whole house humidifier tailored to the size and construction of the building and the type of heating plant.

If that is out of the question, he recommends individual units.

He said the average two-bedroom apartment needs about 10 gallons of water a day, and a two-floor house, about 18 gallons.

To actually determine the size units needed, first learn the cubic footage of the area to be humidified. Blankenship says that information can be obtained from the builder or, if you rent, from your landlord or management company.

The cost, like the number and size of units needed, depends on the total physical layout. He estimated the cost and installation charges for a furnace humidifier for a two-story house with basement and three or four bedrooms at $175-$225.

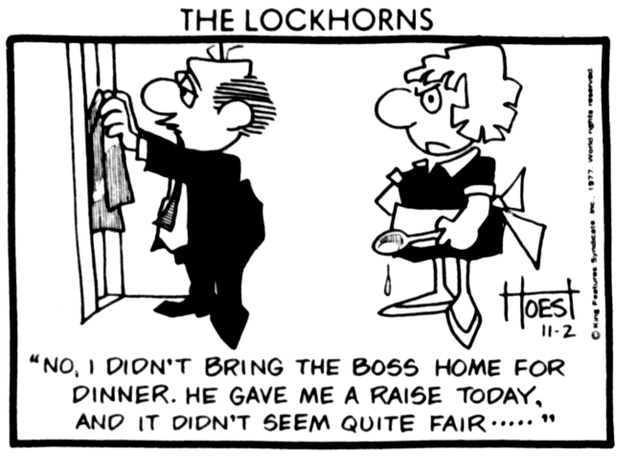

For a two-bedroom house or a one-or two-bedroom apartment with its own furnace, about $125-$175;

And for a two-bedroom apartment without its own furnace, about $75-$100.

Energy costs to operate vary widely, Blankenship said. He said in many cases a central humidifier hooked up with a furnace uses less electricity than a 25-watt light bulb.

For maximum efficiency, he said, portable humidifiers should be placed near heating and cooling outlets, generally in a hallway, to get maximum distribution.

PINCHED NERVES

PAIN — headache, backache, shoulder pains, arm and chest pains, a multitude of assorted pains in all parts of the body — develops quickly when the spinal cord or one of its nerves is pinched.

Pain may appear at the point where the nerve is pinched, or it may make its appearance in that part of the body served by the pinched nerve.

A pinched nerve can, and often does, lead to the development of disease conditions in the kidneys, bladder, liver, lungs, heart or other vital organs.

The chiropractor is an expert in one of the most advanced healing arts known to man. Through his soothing, professional spinal adjustments, he restores the normal flow of powerful nerve energy through the spinal cord and the nervous system to all muscles, organs and other vital parts of the body to bring lasting, effective relief.

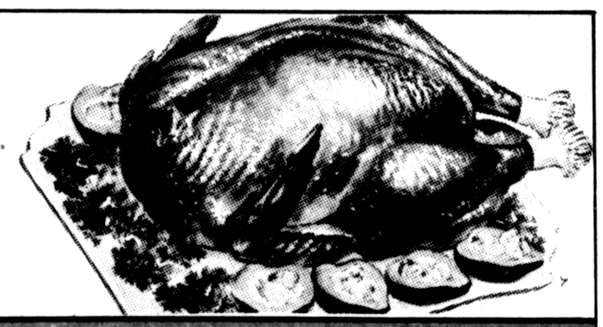

With proper nerve energy flow restored, nature heals from within, eliminating discomfort and banishing disease.

Schools hold special programs

Gong Show auditions this week

EAST STROUDSBURG — Adults and students will have a chance to audition for and win a place in the area's first Gong Show by strutting their stuff next Friday and Saturday.

Judges will take all auditions at the Middle Smithfield Elementary School on Friday, Nov. 4 from 7-9 p.m. and on Saturday, Nov. 5 from 9-12 a.m. Acts which make it through the auditions will be in the Gong Show to be held Friday, Nov. 11 at 7:30 p.m. at the Middle Smithfield auditorium.

The Gong Show is sponsored by the Bushkill-Smithfield PTO and will benefit the trip fund for students. For more information about the auditions or the show, call Marianne Bridges at 588-6217 or the school at 421-1561.

Reading for charity

PEN ARGYL — Third, fourth, fifth, and sixth grade students at the Wind Gap Elementary School and seventh and eighth grade students at the Pen Argyl Area Junior High School are presently engaged in reading as many books as possible in the next four weeks for the Multiple Sclerosis Foundation.

Mr. Richard Sterner, at Wind Gap, and Mrs. Blue, at the high school, showed a film and explained the MS read-A-Thon program to the students.

Interested students are signing up as many sponsors as possible who will pledge a certain amount of money for each book read. At the end of the four-week period each student will determine the amount of each sponsor's pledge and the money will be used to help fight Multiple Sclerosis.

Readers of the month

PEN ARGYL — Sixth grade students-of-the-month for the month of October were selected in the reading classes at the Pen Argyl Area Wind Gap Elementary School. Certificates were awarded to David Dapko, Miss DeNicuola's reading class; Cindy Keller, Mrs. Barbara Miller's class; Tracy Klump, Mrs. Linda Folk's class; Jeffery Knecht, Mr. Louis Felker's class; Michael Saylor, Mrs. Linda Martin's class; and Robin Vargo, Mr. Byron Weaver's class.

Awards were presented for general excellence in each of the reading classes.

Raptors discussed

PEN ARGYL — The sixth grade at the Pen Argyl Area Wind Gap Elementary School was recently honored by a visit from Hope Carpenter of the Pennsylvania Raptor Rescue. Mrs. Carpenter is licensed by Pennsylvania to operate a rehabilitation center for birds of the Raptor family, which includes hawks, falcons, and eagles.

Mrs. Carpenter was accompanied by her pet hawk, Takka. She presented a slide program showing various raptors she has rescued and returned to the wilds.

Mrs. Carpenter said clubs to educate young people in the preservation of raptors could be a link in the balance of nature. Many students volunteered to join such a club using the Wind Gap School, if possible, as a meeting place.

U.N. day held

PEN ARGYL — The Pen Argyl Area School District observed United Nations Day in several ways on Friday, Oct. 21. At the Plainfield Elementary School, music classes sang the songs of many countries while displaying the flag of that country. Instrumental music and actions were additional features.

Kindergarten classes saw filmstrips about children around the world, sang songs from other countries, and displayed dolls of various nationalities. Daily snack time featured international foods.

Servomation lunch for all students was international in flavor including ravioli (Italy), Pineapple juice (Philippines), tossed salad (U.S.) with Russian dressing, homemade French bread, and apple streusel (Germany).

Special citizens day

PEN ARGYL — Seventy-five special citizens were guests of the sixth grade students and faculty of the Pen Argyl Area Wind Gap Elementary School on Tuesday, October 25. This marks the first annual Special Citizens Day to honor the senior citizens of the area.

The students wrote personal letters to accompany invitations in addition to preparing favors and name tags for each visitor. Guests will be requested to complete forms concerning their hobbies and other interests to share with the students on future visits.

After a word of welcome by Thomas Ciccarelli, Wind Gap principal, the sixth grade students presented a talent show in the auditorium after which the guests were given a tour of the building.

Students and parents prepared refreshments that were served in the sixth grade area.

This activity was the culmination of a study about family relationships.

Elderly to tour

BANGOR — Senior citizens are invited to tour schools in the Bangor Area School District from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Nov. 17.

Principals of each school will conduct the tours and answer questions. Lunch will be provided.

Persons should make reservations at the school they wish to tour by Nov. 15.

Local cheerleader

LEWISBURG—Patricia A. Dorsey, a senior from Bangor, is one of 20 members of the varsity cheerleading squad at Bucknell University.

A 1974 graduate of Bangor Area High School, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Dorsey, 546 West High Street, Bangor.

Dr. says parents are people, too

MILFORD — On Thursday, Nov. 3, Catherine Hess, M. D., will be conducting a two-hour workshop during the program "Parents Are People, Too!"

Dr. Hess will conduct her workshop at 12:45 p.m. at the Pinchot Estate.

Dr. Hess' "Coping With Youth In Family Conflicts" will deal with the inability of youth and families to cope. She claims dethronement and disintegration plagues the family. She will also deal with the forces affecting the family and the youths' inability to handle emotional conflicts — all problems that she feels are solvable through values clarification.

A graduate of Temple Medical School, Dr. Hess is a certified obstetrician and gynocologist. Several of her post academic appointments and positions include: Chief of the OB/GYN Department of Philadelhia General Hospital; medical director of Women's Medical; medical director of American Cancer Society; assistant commissioner of health for New York City; Narcotics Coordinator for New York City, and Narcotics Advisor to Pennsylvania Secretary of Health.

Having worked within the drug scene for 17 years, with 25,000 teachers in Value Clarification and with Peer Counseling programs, Dr. Hess' two-hour workshop promises valuable information gathered through knowledge and years of experience, according to a workshop organizer.

"Parents Are People, Too," by Schuylkill County Home Economist Mrs. Ruth Hand, is the opening session for the Nov. 3 workshop, jointly sponsored by Pike County's Child Welfare Services and Cooperative Extension Service.

James VanHorn, Ph. D., will conduct a 12:45 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. workshop on "Disciplining The Younger Child."

Registration of all workshops is requested. For more information, call Mrs. Helen Drabic at 296-6332 or Kate Hayes at 296-6122.

Medicare deductible benefits

EAST STROUDSBURG — People protected under Medicare's medical insurance who have not met the 1977 $60 annual deductible by Oct. 1 may have a break going into 1978, according to Ray J. Little, Social Security manager in Monroe County.

Little said a person who has not met the annual deductible going into the last three months of a year can count any covered expenses he has that count towards the deductible during those last three months that are used to meet that year's deductible towards the deductible for the next year as well.

Little gave the following example of how this provision works. Suppose Anna M. has been lucky and has not been sick during the first nine months of 1977. She had no expenses covered by Medicare at all. But in mid-October she became ill and had expenses of $45 for services covered by Medicare. She receives no more covered services for the remainder of the year, so Medicare pays nothing because she did not meet the $60 annual deductible. But, the $45 will count toward the 1978 $60 annual deductible. And if she receives covered services in 1978, Medicare medical insurance will start paying its share after she has covered bills for an additional $15 in 1978.

Complete information about this provision and all of the services covered by Medicare can be found in "Your Medicare handbook." Copies can be obtained at any Social Security office.

The East Stroudsburg Social Security office is located at 68 Analomink Street, 421-8490. It is open from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Fundraising for kidney patients

SCRANTON — The Hemodialysis Patients' Association of Northeastern Pennsylvania is conducting a door-to-door campaign through nine counties to raise funds for some 200 kidney dialysis patients treated at Moses Taylor Hospital Renal Unit and Bio-Medical Applications Renal Unit in Wilkes-Barre.

Contributions can be sent to one of two hemodialysis offices, one at 507 Linden St., Scranton, and the other at 56-58 West W. Linden St., Wilkes-Barre.

Craftsmen to exhibit at Keystone

LA PLUME — Peters Valley Craftsmen will present craft exhibits and demonstrations from Nov. 20 to Dec. 17 at Miller Library at Keystone Junior College, La Plume.

The exhibits will include the work of ten craftsmen, in blacksmithing, ceramics, fine metals, photography, textiles and wood.

Nov. 20, there will be demonstrations in chain saw carving by Howard Werner and stretched clay forms by Tom Neugebauer.

Nov. 21, Suzanne Adams will demonstrate paper making and Dick Sextone, blacksmithing.

Peters Valley is a residential community of craftspeople and a school of crafts in northeastern New Jersey at the Delaware Water Gap.

Situated in historic buildings, studios operate in the areas of blacksmithing, ceramics, fine metals, photography, textiles and wood. Crafts professionals come to Peters Valley to live and work for periods of two to three years.

In addition, an extensive series of classes, including spring and fall weekend workshops, and one and two week summer sessions, as well as ten to 13-week sessions for potential professionals are conducted by practicing professional craftspeople at Peters Valley.

Held by wife

WINCHESTER, England (UPI) — Police answered an emergency call from a man who said he was being held against his will. When they arrived, the police discovered a husband-and-wife fight. The woman hid her husband's artificial leg in order to keep him at home.

S-burg considers traffic plan

STROUDSBURG — A meeting between Stroudsburg Borough officials and state Department of Transportation officials recently could prove crucial to the future of traffic flow through Stroudsburg.

The meeting, to be at 7:30 p.m. in the Borough council chambers, was brought about when the borough joined with PennDOT in a project that will alter or reroute traffic patterns in downtown Stroudsburg.

Borough manager Fred Wilder said Monday that the borough especially is concerned about the congestion at Fifth and Main Streets, where three highways — Rtes. 209, 611 and 191 — cross paths.

Wilder said PennDOT wants Rte. 209 through Stroudsburg either eventually widened to four or five lanes or rerouted in its vision of future traffic patterns through Stroudsburg.

"We're hoping we can plan traffic needs for 1990," Wilder said, adding that within two or three years some changes may be seen.

One change many Fifth Street area merchants have long waited for is additional parking areas either along Main Street between Fifth and Sixth Streets or off-street parking.

The PennDOT official who will meet with Wilder and Borough Council members is Harold Newton.

SADDLED UP — A Stroud Township Volunteer gets help from fellow firemen as he puts on oxygen equipment to enter a smoke-filled apartment on Fifth Street Tuesday. Rugs near a heat vent apparently ignited.

Stroud douses fire in vacant apartment

STROUDSBURG — A pile of rugs near a gas furnace vent ignited Tuesday in a two-apartment woodframe house at 419 N. Fifth St., Stroud Township resulting in a fire which caused smoke damage to the ground floor apartment.

The fire was discovered by the tenants who live in the upstairs apartment. The ground floor apartment was vacated several days earlier.

Stroud Township volunteer firemen were called and the fire was quickly brought under control. Firemen placed a ventilator fan in a ground floor window to draw out the smoke.

The house, which is owned by William Cramer, is due to be torn down within the week to make room for a parking lot.

Tenants of the upstairs apartment reported no damage. No one was injured.

ESSC plans convocations

EAST STROUDSBURG — "The Conditions of Humankind — Present and Future" will be the theme for the Spring, 1978 Convocations being planned at East Stroudsburg State College.

The Convocation program will be held April 11 through 13 on campus when numerous national and internationally-known speakers will be brought to the college to address various aspects of this general theme. The Convocations are held each year in an effort to introduce the entire college community and area residents to the concepts presented by well-known professionals from throughout the nation.

The Convocations this year are being planned by a student coordinating committee which will be responsible for the selection of speakers invited to campus. The various student organizations on campus will also be responsible for making all arrangements in preparation for the April 11 through 13 program.

Commuting day set

A special program for prospective commuting and transfer students will be held at East Stroudsburg State College on Tuesday, Nov. 15.

High school students in the general area of the college will be invited to participate in this special one-day program designed to present a better understanding of the curricular offerings and extra-curricular activities offered by the college. The program will begin at 10 a.m. and conclude in mid-afternoon after the visiting students have had an opportunity to participate in a class of their choosing.

Students now attending the college who have transferred from other institutions or those who commute from home each day will serve as the college representatives for the program. The day provides an opportunity for prospective students to experience, first-hand college life.

In past years, students from all Monroe County schools and a number of Northampton County schools have participated in this program.

Biologists meet

The Northeast Regional meeting of the Association of State College and University Biologists will be held on the East Stroudsburg State College campus Saturday, Nov. 5.

Dr. Dorothy Nowack, executive director of the Lehigh Valley Area Health Education Center will serve as the keynote speaker when she discusses "Allied Health Programs of the Area."

Water Gap industry reduces discharge

DELAWARE WATER GAP — Heico Inc. recently installed about $250,000 worth of anti-pollution devices in its plant, a company official has told the Delaware Water Gap Chamber of Commerce.

W. G. Robertson, vice president for manufacturing of Heico, brought the chamber up to date on Heico's anti-pollution equipment at the chamber's last meeting.

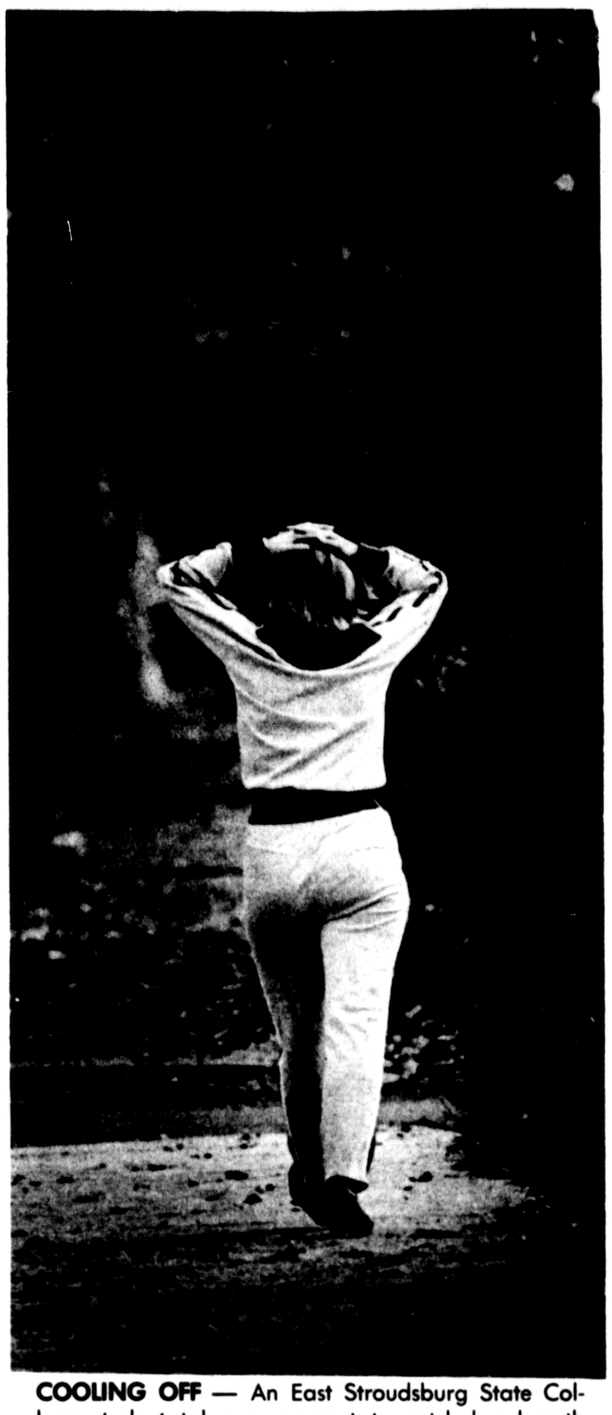

He said much of the equipment, installed over the last six months, will recoup ammonia gas discharged by Heico's chemical plant on Rte. 611 in Delaware Water Gap.

Tom Wilkins, chamber of commerce secretary, said some borough residents had complained about the gas discharge, but that since the anti-pollution devices have been installed there have been no complaints. "The chamber is pleased and Heico said it will continue to cooperate with the community," he said.

In other business, the chamber accepted about 12 new members, increasing its membership by about one third to approximately 42 members.

The chamber hopes to decorate the borough for Christmas and will discuss plans in detail at its November meeting. Members would like to put a Nativity scene in the gazebo outside of the Church of the Mountain on Main Street, and to put miniature Christmas trees and wooden candles on borough street lights.

At its November meeting, the chamber also will elect new officers, and Monroe County Planner Carl Kindred is tentatively scheduled to speak about future growth possibilities and community planning for Delaware Water Gap.

Judge O'Brien for yourself.

His Qualities for Judgeship. His Record of Fairness:

On December 30, 1965, Frederick D. McDonald, attorney and principal in the firm Hoffman, McDonald & Hoffman in Allegan, Michigan, addressed the following letter to the Judge Advocate General, U. S. Army, Pentagon, Washington, D. C.

"Re: Capt. Peter J. O'Brien, JAGC

Dear Sir:

I recently acted as individual defense counsel for an accused in a general court-martial tried at the Sixth U.S. Army Headquarters at the Presidio of San Francisco.

In connection with the trial, it became necessary to work with Capt. Peter J. O'Brien, the appointed trial counsel. Capt. O'Brien displayed a fine professional competence, and demonstrated an outstanding sense of fairness during the trial.

I believe that he was most effective before the court, and he did so while adhering to high standards. Capt. O'Brien certainly reflects credit upon the U.S. Army.

If appropriate, it is hoped that this letter might be included in Capt. O'Brien's Army records.

Sincerely yours, Frederick D. McDonald"

Pete O'Brien was fair as a prosecutor. He will be fair as your Judge. Let's better yesterday's system and make it work for us today. Pete O'Brien's qualities for Judgeship, his energy of youth and maturity of experience can do it now.

Vote O'Brien for Judge.

Vote O'Brien for Judge.

Confession discounted

Linda Dixon conviction overturned

By MIKE JOSEPH
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — The state Supreme Court has granted a new trial to Linda Joyce Dixon, the Analomink woman who was convicted in Monroe County Court four years ago of murdering her infant son.

The Supreme Court decision means that the only damaging evidence against Dixon — a confession — will not be allowed in court should the new trial take place.

Dixon, who was 22 years old at the time of her trial in 1973, has served four years of a six and a half to 13 year prison term she was sentenced to after her non-jury-trial conviction of second-degree murder before President Judge Arlington W. Williams.

Monroe County District Attorney James F. Marsh, who prosecuted Dixon, was outraged at the opinion and said it may mean that a confessed murderer will be set free.

"The Commonwealth is left out in right field without a glove because we don't have any other information except that confession," Marsh said Tuesday, a day after he received the Supreme Court ruling.

The Supreme Court ruled that Dixon's confession is inadmissible evidence because it was obtained outside established constitutional rights afforded suspects.

Dixon confessed to strangling her son, Christopher, shortly after she was picked up August 14, 1973, in an Easton apartment by state troopers Alfred P. Drozdowski and Delmar J. Wills and Stroud Township Police Chief James Carey.

Dixon had recently moved to Easton from Analomink. Her parents had asked her to leave their Analomink home and she was believed to have been living under the sky in the woods with her son before she moved to Easton with her son.

According to court testimony, after she was picked up by police and taken to Easton police headquarters, she was asked whether she knew why she was being questioned. She answered yes, agreed to waive her constitutional rights and then was shown a picture of her son by Drozdowski, who asked, "Where is Chrissy?"

Drozdowski testified Dixon began sobbing at the sight of the picture and after 10 minutes confessed, "I did it." Then, according to Drozdowski's testimony, she said she had choked her son with her hands and buried him in a plastic bag near Analomink.

The Supreme Court ruling said the confession was inadmissible because Dixon was not given enough information for her to be certain that the questioning was to deal with her son.

Although no murder warrant had been issued for Dixon, a non-related arrest warrant on her failure to repay apartment damage had been issued. The Supreme Court ruled that she could have thought the questioning was to deal with the apartment damage.

"Appellant's (Dixon's) primary contention before us is that she did not 'knowingly and intelligently' waive her constitutional rights to remain silent and to have a lawyer present during the police interrogation," the Supreme Court ruled, "and it was therefore error to refuse her request to suppress her oral confession. On the basis of this record, we must agree."

For George Royle IV, one of Dixon's two Stroudsburg defense lawyers, the Supreme Court decision was a victory.

"I think the community is going to be outraged tomorrow when they hear this, but I think they're going to be outraged for the wrong reasons," Royle said.

"If we're going to construct a (judicial) system that is designed to get to the truth and will give people the benefit of the doubt, and presume their innocence until proven guilty, then the prosecution must abide by those rules."

The appeal, which is almost automatic in murder convictions, was argued before the eastern district of the state Supreme Court on Nov. 16, 1976, by Marsh and George Westervelt, Royle's law partner. The Supreme Court decision was filed last Friday.

Marsh has 90 days to decide whether to prosecute Dixon again.

He said he will weigh the cost to the county of another trial in view of the facts that his best evidence has been thrown out and that Dixon's parole in two years is likely. She already has been granted several furloughs from the state's only penitentiary for women, in Muncy.

Marsh criticized the state Supreme Court for allowing a confessed murderer to get a new trial.

"It's appalling," he said. "Here's a woman who strangled her son to death with her own hands and now she's going to be set free. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania is just destroying justice in the state. They're making it a chess game for the police and prosecutors. If you make a mistake with a technicality, everything gets thrown out."

Linda Dixon during trial

Royle, meanwhile, said that all small aspects of the law amass to form a judicial system that must be adhered to.

"Much of law is based on technicality but when the guidelines are there they have to be obeyed," Royle said. "To get a person to waive their rights, you've got to give them a good idea of what they're being questioned for."

Royle said that after her first two years in prison Dixon began recovering from a very depressed state and she now is gaining self-respect and has improved her appearance.

"No matter what the outcome," Royle said, "don't think that this is someone who is going without punishment. She has been punished."

Held for illegal calls

Dial-a-trial for phone phreak after hearing

By STEVE BLAKELY
Pocono Record Reporter

CANADENSIS — John T. Draper, 34, of Canadensis R.D. 1, better known as the "King of the Phone Phreaks," was bound over to Monroe County Court Tuesday on charges he used a computer in his living room to make illegal telephone calls all over the country.

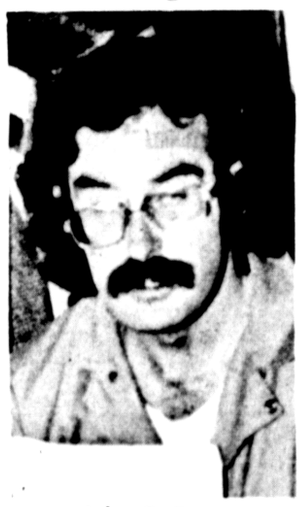

An alleged accomplice, Andrew Wright Jr., 31, was also ordered held for related charges.

Draper, nationally known as "Captain Crunch" because of his use of a cereal box whistle to make free long distance telephone calls, and Wright were arrested at their Canadensis home Oct. 22 for allegedly using sophisticated "blue box" electronics equipment to defraud the phone company.

At a preliminary hearing Tuesday before District Magistrate Marjorie Shumaker, Draper was bound to court on charges of theft of communications services, theft of services and criminal conspiracy. Charges of possessing instruments of crime and theft of trade secrets were dropped.

Wright was bound over on charges of theft of services and criminal conspiracy. Related charges of theft of communications services, possessing instruments of crime and theft of trade secrets were dismissed.

During Tuesday's hearing, William Beam, a security manager for Bell Telephone Co., testified two desk-type computers in the living room of Draper and Wright's Canadensis house were used to make 165 illegal long distance phone calls between Oct. 19 and 22, when Bell Co. technicians were monitoring their telephone line.

John T. Draper

Beam said the unlawful calls were placed to New York, Florida, Iowa and California, and were worth at least $632. He said the homemade computer system, complete with programing cassettes and video screens, allowed Draper and Wright to cut into the phone company's toll-free "800" lines, disguise where they were making their calls from, and bill long-distance calls to innocent, unsuspecting customers.

Kenneth Hopper, a technician in the Bell Laboratories in Holmdale, N. J., testified the computers were even programed with special password routines and phase-lock patterns designed as part of "a harassing program to prohibit someone from having easy access to the program."

Hopper and other telephone company technicians reassembled the two computers taken from Draper and Wright's Canadensis home, and are still trying to figure out how they work.

"We actually completed a call to a marine insurance company in Florida using the equipment," Hopper said. "There are many things that indicate the capacity for 'blue box' fraud. But there are a lot of things we don't understand about it yet."

The computers were found to transmit electronic pulses from dial phones, "touch-tone" frequencies and multi-frequency tones — especially a 2,600-cycle tone — that can cut into telephone long distance lines. The touch-tone and multi-frequency codes coming from the Draper house are not part of the Bell Telephone Co. switching system in Canadensis, according to Beam.

A phone company investigation was started Oct. 14.

Eastburg to ask state to order dam removal

EAST STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg Council Tuesday decided to ask state officials to take a second look at a dam in the Brodheads Creek and consider ordering the dam removed.

About nine flats area residents complained during the council meeting that the partially-completed dam, built by Stroud Township resident Palmer Serfass, was funneling the creek towards the East Stroudsburg bank and would cause the flats area to flood during a heavy rain.

Serfass began building the dam from the Stroud Township bank years ago, and was ordered this year by the state Department of Environmental Resources to stop construction.

However, the residents said that as long as the dam remains, it will continue to channel water between the end of the dam and the East Stroudsburg bank, eroding the bank and holding the threat of a flood over their heads.

One resident presented to council pictures taken Aug. 1 and this week, showing where the dam had already caused the bank to erode.

Borough Manager Donald Gage recently wrote to DER, asking for assurances that if the dam remains it will cause no further erosion to the borough's bank and will not hurt proposed work on the levee in the creek. While waiting for a reply, he will now ask DER officials to meet with the borough and consider having the dam removed.

DER had looked at the dam this summer, and told Serfass he could continue working on it if he got the proper permits.

In other business, council accepted a bid of $356,913 from Riebe Construction Co., Palmerton, for drainage improvements throughout the borough. Of eight bids for the project, Riebe's was second lowest. The lowest was $296,888 from Marvec All State, Verona, N. J., but the firm later said it made a mistake filing the bid and that it should have been about $42,000 higher. It asked to withdraw the bid.

At a public hearing before the council meeting to discuss ways of spending about $332,000 in community development funds, Smith Street resident Anne Robertson suggested putting sidewalks along Smith Street.

"There is a lot of vehicle traffic along Smith Street, and it is dangerous for the college students and school children to walk along it to get to school," she said.

Another resident asked if the funds could go towards helping the elderly pay for heating bills. Gage said they should contact the Monroe County Redevelopment Authority, which sponsors a winterization program for low-income residents.

M-Smithfield holds hearing

Residents oppose rehab center for alcoholics

MARSHALLS CREEK — An alcohol rehabilitation center proposed for the old Echo Lake Hotel ran into opposition Tuesday night from people who said the center will deflate property values and adversely affect their families.

About 50 residents, businessmen and attorneys attended a public hearing on whether Middle Smithfield Township Supervisors should grant a conditional use permit to HYG Company, Inc., which has proposed conversion of the old motel property to a treatment facility.

Most of the half dozen people who spoke said such a facility is needed to combat the problem of transient alcoholics in the Pocono Mountains.

However, they said they fear for the safety of their wives and children, who will be living next to the 140-acre property on Rte. 209 in the township.

Sidney Krawitz, an attorney representing Pocono Palace resort and Pine Ridge developers, added a new twist when he said Pocono Palace has halted a $3.5 million addition until the rehabilitation center issue is resolved.

In addition to affecting property values, Krawitz said, the center would affect nearby residents. He said 68 per cent of the treated alcoholics slip back into their habit and characterized them as "potentially dangerous."

Attorney Daniel Higgins, however, said there have been no such problems with clients at a nearby halfway house for alcoholics.

Four residents said the center should be more isolated.

Resort owner Peter Ahnert pointed out the center would be within 1,000 yards of a bar. He also questioned who would police the center to make sure only 48 people would stay there.

Tom Bonser, chairman of township supervisors, said a conditional use agreement would have to be drawn up to set forth rules of operation.

Attorney Harry Lee cautioned supervisors not to stray from the resort character of the community. He said since there already is one alcoholism center in the township, the addition of a second might attract more of the facilities.

Supervisors will render a decision by Nov. 10.

Monroe candidates for school director

STROUDSBURG — Voters in all four Monroe County school districts will be electing three persons to serve six-year terms on their boards of school directors.

In two of the districts, however, Tuesday's polling is just a formality because the races were settled in the spring primary when the same candidates won both parties' nominations. These are Pleasant Valley and Pocono Mountain.

In Stroudsburg, where three are to be elected at large, there are four candidates. Two of them, Elizabeth Harlacher and William Possinger will appear on both the Republican and Democratic tickets. Joseph Fleming will round out the Democratic slate and Alice Nitrauer Luongo is the third G.O.P. candidate. None of the four candidates is an incumbent.

In East Stroudsburg, there are also four candidates vying for three at large seats. Incumbents Irving G. Sommer and Ralph G. Turn will appear on both the Republican and Democratic slates. The third Democratic candidate is William Luckey and the third Republican nominee is Ralph A. Marsh.

In Pleasant Valley School District the same three individuals will appear on both parties' tickets. All new faces, the candidates are Gail A. Burney, Frances Dorshimer and Virginia Stiff.

Pocono Mountain School District is the only one in the county which does not elect school board members at large. The district is divided into nine districts, with three seats elected every two years.

In districts I, II and III, the races were settled in the primaries. In Tuesday's election, the candidates will appear on both tickets. They are: Region I, Barrett and Paradise Townships, Joseph J. Kuchinski; Region II, Jackson Township, Mount Pocono and Pocono Township, Theodore H. Sebring; and Region III, Coolbaugh, Tobyhanna and Tunkhannock Townships, David V. Keiper.

The three men are all currently members of the board so the panel will be unchanged after the election.

IU 20 task force meets in Stroudsburg

STROUDSBURG — A meeting of the Local Task Force for Colonial Northampton Intermediate Unit Number 20 will be held at 9:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 7, at the Arlington Heights Learning Center, 1100 North Ninth Street, Stroudsburg.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss items of concern for the education of mentally retarded citizens.

Grass fires doused in Monroe

STROUDSBURG — Three Monroe County fire companies doused small grass fires Tuesday as Indian Summer's dry spell began showing its effect.

Marshalls Creek firemen responded to a small brush fire at 1:30 p.m. along Airport Road in Smithfield Township.

Stroudsburg firefighters doused a small blaze that broke out at 3:40 p.m. in a pile of leaves just west of Stroudsburg High School.

And Pocono Summit firemen put out a small woods fire behind Kinsley's Market on Rte. 940 in Pocono Summit.

Damage from all three fires was minimal.

Some juvenile offenders now subject to publicity

STROUDSBURG — A recently enacted state law requires Pennsylvania common pleas courts to make public the names of juveniles 14 years old or older if the juveniles have been convicted of some violent crimes.

The new law also provides that the names of juveniles be open to the public if the juveniles have been arrested for certain violent crimes after previously having been arrested and convicted for another such crime.

The law went into effect when it was enacted on Aug. 3, according to Monroe County President Judge Arlington W. Williams. Judge Williams said there have been no cases since then for which the new law would have applied.

The crimes in question are murder, rape, kidnaping, robbery, arson, burglary or other crimes that involve "serious" bodily harm or the threat of such injury.

The new law supersedes a 1973 law that banned criminal record disclosure for persons less than 18 years old unless the juveniles were being tried in murder cases or had been certified to stand trial as an adult for other crimes.

The new law still requires authorities to keep juvenile records separate from adult records.

Records for juveniles who do not fall under the public disclosure provisions of the new law are open only to:

— The court having the child before it;

— Lawyers for the defendant or prosecution;

— Officers of institutions or agencies to which the child is committed;

— Law enforcement officials of other jurisdictions when access to the juvenile records is necessary to their investigations;

— And other courts, detention centers or parole boards which must supervise the juvenile.

Monroe County District Attorney James F. Marsh, citing the rise of violent crimes by juveniles, said the new law is a "great idea."

Court docket

STROUDSBURG — Northeastern Bank of East Stroudsburg has filed a $13,088 suit against John C. Flood Associates of Stroudsburg and the company's president, John C. Flood of Mount Pocono, according to papers filed in the Monroe County Courthouse.

The bank claims it loaned Flood $12,493 last year, but that he defaulted on the note. The suit seeks repayment of the loan, plus costs and interest.

STROUDSBURG — Youngstown Aluminum Products of Ohio has filed a $4,932 suit against Edinger-Wyckoff Inc. of Stroudsburg, according to papers in the county courthouse. The Ohio company claims Edinger-Wyckoff never paid for extruded aluminum goods that it ordered.

Impending knee surgery threatens Simpson's career

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — The spectacular career of O.J. Simpson, pro football's most recognized star, may be over.

Simpson, who said he would retire from football after the 1978 season, will undergo left knee surgery soon which will sideline him for the rest of this season. The operation may also force the NFL's second all-time leading ground gainer to alter his plans.

"That's a subject I can't deal with right now," Simpson said regarding his future in football. "I have another year on my contract with the Bills. Once the operation is over and rehabilitation is complete, I'll begin to think about the future. But not before this."

The operation to repair cartilage damage will be performed by team physician Dr. Joseph Godfrey in Buffalo. No date for the surgery was set.

Bills' spokesman L. Budd Thalman said the decision to operate on the former Heisman Trophy winner was a consensus opinion of Godfrey, Dr. Robert Kerlan and Dr. Karl LaBriola.

Kerlan, team physician for the Los Angeles Rams and one of the country's noted orthopedic specialists, and LaBriola examined Simpson Monday in Los Angeles. Simpson flew there following Buffalo's embarrassing 56-17 loss to the expansion Seattle Seahawks Sunday.

Simpson was unable to pinpoint when the injury occurred but said the knee had been bothering him since a game against the New York Jets Oct. 9.

"I'm naturally tremendously disappointed but the doctors agree that the cartilage be removed," Simpson said. "As the condition deteriorated, it became more and more difficult for me to play."

Simpson, who holds the league's single-season rushing record with 2,003 yards gained in 1973, touched off speculation as to his future following the Seattle game. He picked up just 32 yards and sat out the second half.

Published reports have indicated that Simpson, who wants to pursue an acting career following his pro football days, would not return to the Bills next season if his knee needed surgery.

Simpson has gained 10,183 yards in nine seasons with the Bills, including a league single game rushing mark of 273 yards against Detroit last season. During a two-year college career at Southern California, he gained 3,423 yards, winning the Heisman Trophy in 1968.

He was bothered by nagging injuries during the current season. A blurred vision problem in his left eye during training camp was diagnosed at Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore as a selfhealing condition.

He suffered a right ankle injury in the Bills' seasonopening loss to Miami. He also missed six games of the 1970 season with a knee injury that did not require surgery.

Simpson, who has been somewhat critical of the Bills' trading away of veteran players, gained 557 yards on 126 carries this season as Buffalo stumbled through seven games with a 1-6 record.

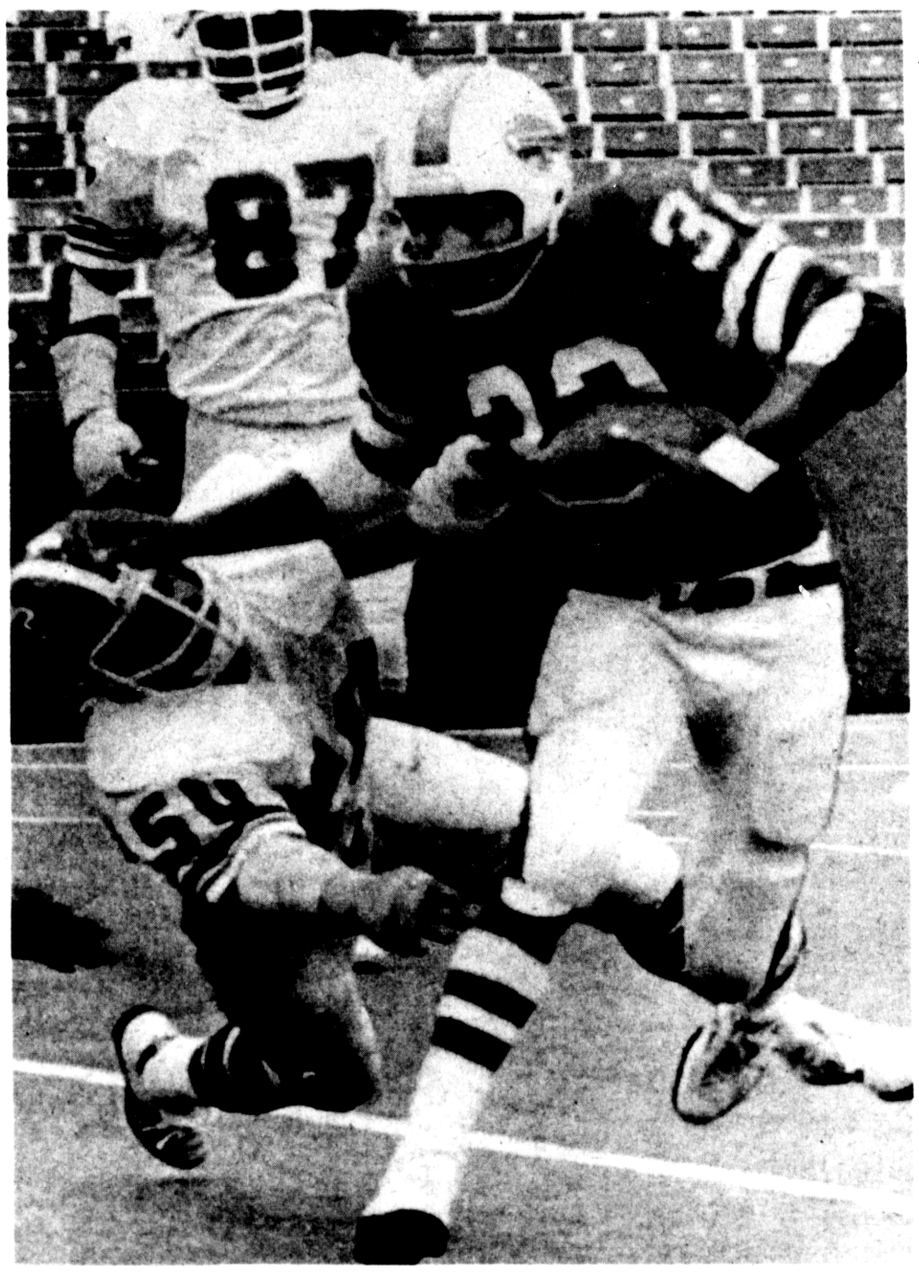

Coach Jim Ringo, already facing enough problems, now has to contend with the loss of Simpson.

"Everyone on the team and the coaching staff is upset at the prospect of losing O.J. for the season," said Ringo. "We all pray for a successful surgery and a swift and complete recovery."

"It's an enormous loss to football and the Buffalo Bills," said Bills' owner Ralph C. Wilson Jr. "Our number one concern is O.J.'s health. He has contributed too much to this game and to this franchise to have any other considerations."

Simpson was scheduled to remain in Los Angeles with his family until next week.

Simpson's loss came just a few hours after the Bills lost rookie running back Curtis Brown for four to six weeks with a sprained left knee. The Bills have just three other running backs on their roster.

JUICE TURNED OFF? — This may be one of the last times you'll see superstar running back O. J. Simpson wheeling and dealing, if fears over surgery on his left knee hold true. Simpson, who had already said he was retiring after the 1978 season, is out for the year and is facing a long rehabilitation process and possibly even retirement. (UPI)

Surgery may end O.J.'s quest for rushing lead, title ring

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — The two things O.J. Simpson wanted most in pro football, a Super Bowl ring and Jim Brown's rushing title, have eluded him — apparently forever.

Simpson will undergo knee surgery soon and his football future is in doubt. He went into the current season 2,686 yards behind Brown. He's compiled 10,183 yards in nine seasons with the Bills while Brown's nine-year total was 12,312.

Simpson had planned to play two more years in an effort to pass Brown and sought a full-time movie career after football.

His single-game rushing mark of 273 yards against Detroit last season marked the sixth time he had rushed for 200 or more yards in a game, an all-time NFL mark. He has 41 100-yard rushing games, second only to the 58 times Brown hit the 100-yard mark during his career.

As a collegian, Simpson won the coveted Heisman Trophy in 1968 during his final year of an abbreviated two-year career at USC. He picked up 3,423 yards on 674 carries and set 13 records at USC under Coach John McKay.

Simpson grew up in San Francisco and said he had numerous "minor" run-ins with the law as a youth. He attended Galileo High School and attended City College of San Francisco for two years before enrolling at USC.

Simpson, whose given name is Orenthal James, was drafted by the Bills in 1969 as the first player picked in the college draft. His career started slowly with Buffalo as the then-famed rookie gained 697 yards in his first pro season.

He missed one game in his rookie season and the final six games of the 1970 campaign because of injuries. He had his poorest game as a pro during the 1971 season when he finished with a minus-10 yards against the Baltimore Colts.

Simpson credited Lou Saban with turning around his pro career in 1972. Saban took over the coaching duties at the start of the season and the Bills offense became a powerful ground gaining machine. Simpson gained 1,251 yards rushing, the first pro season he passed the 1,000 yard mark.

The following season the "Juice" gained 2,000 yards rushing, a mark which may long stand in the annals of the NFL.

His football career was marred somewhat in 1976 when he missed the entire preseason after he asked the Bills to trade him, preferably to a team on the West Coast.

Bills owner Ralph Wilson, who said he wanted to get adequate compensation in any trade involving the star running back, could not work out a deal and convinced Simpson to return to Buffalo. In return, Simpson received a new contract which reportedly made him the game's highest paid player.

Simpson returned to the Bills on the eve of their first regular season game and finished the campaign with an incredible 1,503 yards rushing — without the benefit of training camp.

With Brown's record in sight, Simpson's one remaining goal was to play on a Super Bowl champion. He had criticized the Bills on more than one occasion for making trades which he believed hurt the club's chances to be a Super Bowl contender.

Simpson's career off the football field has flourished. He has made five motion pictures and co-starred with such established box office favorites as Sophia Loren, Burt Lancaster, Richard Harris, Telly Savalas, Peter Fonda, Richard Burton, Lee Marvin, Elliott Gould and Karen Black.

Simpson resides in Los Angeles with his wife, Marguerite, and their three children.

His off-field accomplishments also include winning the popular "Superstars" television competition in 1975. He is probably best known on television for his running-through-airports car rental commercials.

He runs his own O.J. Simpson Enterprises Inc. corporate offices and is the advertising spokesman for Spotbilt Shoes, Dingo Boots and Treesweet Products.

Islanders hammer Flames, 9-0

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — Bryan Trottier became the first Islander player in the club's history to score four goals Tuesday night in leading New York into sole possession of first place in the NHL's Patrick Division with a 9-0 rout of the Atlanta Flames.

The victory extended the Islanders' unbeaten string to seven games and improved their record to 5-2-3. The 13 points is second only to Montreal in the league.

Trottier climaxed a five-goal first period with a pair of late goals. He scored his fourth of the season at 15:15 as he skated down the center of the slot with Atlanta defenseman Richard Mulhern draped over him and flipped a one-handed backhander past Flames' goalie Phil Myre.

With 28 seconds remaining in the session, the Islander center took a behind-the-net pass from rookie Mike Bossy — who had four assists on the evening — and jammed the puck past Myre.

Midway through the second period, Trottier recorded the third hat trick of his career, making New York's lead 7-0. He tallied the Islanders' eighth goal when he converted passes from Bossy and defenseman Bert Marshall at 5:18 of the third session.

Islander goalie Bill Smith and newcomer Goran Hogosta, who came on in the third period combined for the shutout, kicking out 21 shots —most of them harmless.

Cavaliers knock off Nuggets; Warriors top Spurs

'Sonics 3rd straight victim of Hawks

ATLANTA (UPI) — The surprising Atlanta Hawks overcame a seven-point deficit in the final six minutes Tuesday night behind forwards John Drew and Ron Behagen to edge Seattle 102-99 for their third straight win.

Seattle, which lost its third straight, was ahead 91-84 with 5:30 left but the Hawks held the Sonics scoreless for the next three minutes and ran off eight straight points, taking the lead on Behagen's spinning, backhand layup with 2:40 remaining.

With Atlanta still clinging to a 96-95 lead, Drew popped in a 17-footer with 59 seconds left and then 17 seconds later, he stole the ball and drove for a layup to put the Hawks on top 100-95 and wrap up the victory.

Behagen led Atlanta, now 4-1, with 18 points and Drew had 17. Seattle, 1-7, was led by forward Mike Green with 17 and guard Fred Brown with 16.

Seattle, led by center Marvin Webster who had 21 rebounds in the first half, led 52-39 with 3:05 left in the half before the Hawks began their comeback. Atlanta cut the margin to 58-50 at the half and then scored the first eight points after intermission to pull even.

Cavaliers, 110-93

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Jim Chones tossed in a season-high 21 points and grabbed 13 rebounds Tuesday night to spark the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 110-93 NBA victory over the Denver Nuggets.

Chones, who hit on nine of 14 shots, flipped in 12 points in the first period as the Cavs opened up a 20-6 lead and breezed to a 36-28 advantage after the first 12 minutes. Ten Cleveland players hit the scoring column in the second period when the Cavs poured in 34 points to take a 70-54 halftime bulge.

Both teams cooled off during the third period, combining for only 26 points. The Cavs hit on only six of 26 from the field while the Nuggets connected on seven of 19 from the floor.

Walt Frazier, with eight third-period points, added 18 for Cleveland while David Thompson topped Denver with 25 points.

Bucks, 115-95

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Junior Bridgeman scored 23 points Tuesday night to pace the Milwaukee Bucks to an easy 115-95 victory over the cold-shooting Kansas City Kings.

The Kings shot only 25 per cent from the floor in the first period and the Bucks, getting 12 points from Kent Benson and seven assists from Quinn Buckner, rolled to a 31-18 lead at the end of the period.

In the second period, Bridgeman scored 11 points as the Bucks widened their lead to 65-42 at the end of the half.

The Bucks led by as many as 31 points at 90-59 in the second half before slacking off against the Kings.

The Bucks, who are now 4-2, also got 16 points from Ernie Grunfeld and 15 points from Benson. The Kings, who are 3-5, were led by Bill Robinzine with 18 points.

Jazz, 99-88

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Pete Maravich and Leonard Robinson combined for 55 points Tuesday night to give the New Orleans Jazz a 99-88 win over the Chicago Bulls.

Robinson scored 28 points and Maravich 27 as the Jazz won its fifth consecutive game and moved their record to 5-1. Chicago dropped to 4-3.

The Jazz outscored Chicago in every period and grabbed a permanent lead with 14 straight points at the end of the first period.

Artis Gilmore, the Bulls' leading scorer coming into the game, managed only eight points.

Wilbur Holland, a former University of New Orleans star, led Chicago with 26 points.

Warriors, 108-97

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — Rick Barry scored 16 fourth-quarter points Tuesday night to ignite the Golden State Warriors to a 108-97 come-from-behind victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

Barry hit all seven of his field goal attempts and added two free throws in the last-period rally after the Warriors trailed 76-71 at the end of the third quarter. Barry led all scorers with 28 points.

Clifford Ray added 21.

George Gervin led San Antonio, which led most of the contest, with 22 points.

Cage pairing announced for E. S. Invitational

EAST STROUDSBURG — Pairings were announced Tuesday night for the 10th annual East Stroudsburg Invitational Basketball tournament in December.

The first round of the tournament gets underway Tuesday, Dec. 27, with the championship and consolation games set for Wednesday, Dec. 28.

Two long-time rivals, Bangor and Pen Argyl, will open the tournament in the first game of a double-header Dec. 27 in a 7 p.m. start. East Stroudsburg then takes on Port Jervis in the 8:45 p.m. nightcap.

The Cavaliers have won six successive tournament championships, the latest with a 48-36 triumph last December over Salisbury. The Cavaliers had also beaten Salisbury for the tournament championship in 1975.

East Stroudsburg High School athletic director Jack Kist announced the pairings at a special meeting held at the Elks in East Stroudsburg.

Kist also said two tournament customs will be continued this year. A six-player all-tournament team will be selected by media covering the tournament, as well as an all-tournament cheerleading squad selected by special judges.

It was an idea by Kist two years ago that started the cheerleader recognition effort and the idea has drawn tremendous interest during the past two tournaments.

Trophies will be awarded to the tournament champion and runner-up, with individual torphies also presented to the championship team.

All-tournament players will receive trophies while members of the all-tournament cheerleading contingent will once again receive plaques.

Only Miller, Nicklaus surpass Watson's $310,653

Watson posts 3rd best $$ total ever

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tom Watson, in his sixth year on the tour, earned the third highest money total in PGA history with winnings of $310,653 in 1977.

Only Johnny Miller, with $353,021 in 1974, and Jack Nicklaus, who made $320,542 in 1972, have earned more in a single season.

Leonard Thompson, winner of last weekend's Pensacola Open, the final individual event on the tour calendar, moved from 33rd to 23rd on the money list. His $25,000 first-place check gave him a total of $107,293 for the year.

Thompson became the 25th player to pass the $100,000 mark in 1977, the greatest number to crack the six-figure barrier in tour history. The old standard, 24, was established in 1976.

After Watson, winner of four tour events this year including the Masters, were Nicklaus, who earned $284,509 as a three-time victor; Lanny Wadkins, winner of the PGA Championship and the World Series of Golf, with $244,882; Hale Irwin, a three-time winner with $221,456; and Bruce Lietzke, who claimed two tour titles, with $202,156.

Tom Weiskopf, who won once in 1977, was sixth on the money list with $197,639. Weiskopf was followed by Ray Floyd, a double winner with $163,261; Miller Barber, holder of one 1977 tour title, with $148,320; and Hubert Green, U.S. Open champion, with $140,255. Bill Kratzert, a tour sophomore who had one victory, rounded out the top 10 with $134,758.

FANS group protests plans for Red Sox sale

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The sports group F.A.N.S. founded by consumer advocate Ralph Nader Tuesday called the pending sale of the Boston Red Sox to a financial group headed by Haywood Sullivan and Buddy LeRoux "ill-conceived and underfinanced" and a potential "disaster."

In a telegram to American League President Lee MacPhail, F.A.N.S.'s executive director Peter Gruenstein asked the American League owners to disapprove the sale during their meeting in New York this week.

Sullivan is a former Red Sox catcher and recent director of player personnel. LeRoux is a former Red Sox trainer who made a small fortune in real estate and other ventures. The Sullivan-LeRoux group includes about a dozen other investors including Mrs. Tom Yawkey, widow of the late Red Sox owner.

"Please communicate to league owners the FANS' concerns that the proposed sale of the Red Sox be rejected. We believe sale is ill conceived and underfinanced. Approval of such a sale would effectively be placing the Sox under the control of the bank. It would be a disaster for the Red Sox fans to have decisions concerning the welfare of the franchise made by a financial institution whose paramount concern in assuring the prompt repayment of a loan," the telegram said.

Record pacer

MECHANICSBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Keystone Ore, the 1976 Harness Horse of the Year, paced 21 sub-two-minute miles as a three-year-old, a record for a single season. Albatross, who raced from 1970-1972, holds the record for the most two-minute miles, at 37.

Happel relishes playing triple role for Royals

Joe DeVivo

He kicks like a mule, gets open on pass patterns more often than the invisible man, and intercepts so many passes opposing quarterbacks must think he's got ESP.

His name's Brian Happel, Pius X of Roseto's all-around football hero.

Happel has done just about everything a team could ask of one player. And he's done it all well. Just take a look at the statistics he's compiled so far this season.

— At wide receiver, Happel has hauled in 15 passes for 277 yards and three touchdowns. He's also carried the ball 20 times for 81 yards.

— On defense, Happel has picked off eight enemy aerials from his safety position and returned two for touchdowns.

— In the kicking department, he's averaged 37 yards per punt, converted 18 of 24 extra points, and kicked three field goals, including a mammoth 52-yarder against arch-rival Bangor.

Happel must thrive on variety. He claims he enjoys playing each of his triple roles for the Royals.

"I like playing split end because I like to catch the ball and run with it," he says. "I like safety because I like to hit and work with the quarterback. I try to interpret where he's going to throw and I've been pretty successful with it so far.

"Receiving and playing safety are things to help the team. Kicking and punting is something I do individually," he explains. "I take a lot of pride in it. That's why I consider my kicking most important."

Coach John Smith finds it impossible to tell which is Happel's most valuable position. But he's been busy trying to discover more and more ways to take advantage of Brian's multiple talents.

'Jim Turner special' worked

Smith's latest brainstorm was borrowed out of the Denver Broncos' playbook and worked to perfection last Saturday in a 27-22 victory over Dunellen, N.J.

Three weeks ago the Broncos surprised the Oakland Raiders when they lined up for a field goal and instead holder Norris Weese passed to veteran kicker Jim Turner, who was wide open in the flat and lumbered into the end zone for a touchdown.

Instead of Weese and Turner, the Royals used quarterback Gene Caponigro and Happel. They pulled the play with 10 seconds left in the first half and it went for an 18-yard touchdown pass.

"Sometimes there are things that stick out so obviously you miss them. Here we had a wide receiver kicking and a quarterback holding," Smith says. "Thank God somebody did it on TV and I was watching."

"Cap did a great job on it. He moved to his right a little bit, checked one side, then the other, got the proper misdirection, and threw the ball to Brian on the back side," he explained.

Happel's lone problem in making the play work was getting down field.

"I had to run outside of three guys because they were coming in so hard to block the kick," he says.

While the touchdown pass off the fake field goal was a big play, it has to take a back seat as a thrill to Happel's record 52-yard three-pointer against Bangor. But for a few moments, he didn't realize what he had accomplished.

"I didn't think we were going to kick. It was so far away. I didn't have much time to think about it. I just went out and kicked it," he recalls. "I saw the ball on the 42, but it didn't go through my head that it was a 52-yarder until after I kicked it. I said 'Oh my God, I kicked a 52-yarder.'

"I've kicked as long as 56 yards in practice, so I hope I can break that 52-yard record," he says.

Disregards distance

While it's nice to know you can boom 50-yarders, Happel doesn't really think about the long distance he's going for when he lines up to kick.

"Distance doesn't really bother me," he says. "I kick the extra points just as hard as a 50-yarder. I just consider the wind more on long kicks.

"After I get the alignment I concentrate on the ball. I keep my head down until I kick and then watch the ball. I watch the ball leave my foot and then follow through. If you don't follow through, the ball will sway one way or the other."

Happel might never have become an accomplished kicker if he hadn't read a book by ex-New York Giants' star Pete Gogolak, which convinced him he ought to switch from convention to soccer style.

"I felt really funny about kicking soccer style. But I read the book and practiced kicking during the winter in the snow. I started out with a small ball and worked up to regulation size," he says. "By the time I got to the summer of my junior year I was pretty consistent with it."

Happel missed the Royals' first two games last fall with an injury, but came back to kick three field goals, including two which provided the decisive points in victories over St. Pius X of Pottstown and Shamokin Lourdes.

This year his kicking has been even better and he hopes it'll carry him to a collegiate football career at Penn State, South Carolina or Texas-Arlington.

Smith is one man convinced Happel can make it.

"He's definitely Division I in kicking talents," Smith says. "He can't specialize with us because he has to perform on offense and defense to make his contribution to the team. That specialization will take place next year."

And if he's good while dividing his talents among three areas, imagine what will happen if Happel just concentrates his efforts on kicking. He might become great.

Warriors down Glassboro

EAST STROUDSBURG — In field hockey, there are goals and there are GOALS. Hope Donnell scored one of those GOALS Tuesday which players, coaches and fans will remember for a long time in leading East Stroudsburg State College to a 3-1 victory over Glassboro State.

"It was just a gorgeous play," indicated Jan Garman, ESSC field hockey coach in referring to Vicky Scheidt's shot from the right side and Donnell's perfect reverse stick action which sent the ball into the goal midway through the second half.

Scheidt came down on the right side, beat the Glassboro fullback and drove a shot which was wide to the left of the cage. Donnell was on the spot, however, and turned her stick just at the right moment to redirect the ball past the goalie.

"The timing was so beautiful," said Garman. "It was a nice clear drive across from Vicky and Hope timed it perfectly with the reverse stick."

It was the Warriors' third goal of the game and came after 13:14 of the second half. Glassboro notched its lone goal five minutes later on a shot by Kathy Kaiser.

ESSC scored twice in the first half. Back Darlene Hershey flicked a penalty stroke high into the nets at 12:47 for the first goal. The penalty was accessed against the Glassboro goalie for sitting on the ball.

The Donnell and Scheidt combination accounted for the second goal. This time Scheidt made the shot from the center after Donnell had flicked the ball across the goalmouth from right baseline.

The Warriors came close to scoring at least three other times in the first half, all on shots by Nancy Skean, two of which were just wide and a third on which goalie Sharon Weldon made a nice kick save.

In the first half, Glassboro State didn't get off a single shot and ESSC goalie Dawn Dochterman didn't touch the ball at all.

The win raised the Warriors' record to 5-3 with one regular-season game remaining at Ursinus Friday. Glassboro State is now 2-8-1.

ESSC also won the junior varsity game, 3-0, with Sharon Thomas, Maureen Oakes and Susan Eichert scoring the three goals.

ESSC's Strunk retains lead in rushing, scoring stats

EAST STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg State College running back Harold Strunk continues to lead the Pennsylvania Conference's Eastern Division in rushing and scoring.

Strunk rushed for 193 yards on 17 carries in last Saturday's 69-14 romp over Cortland State to bring his season's total to 667 yards in six games, a 111.2 per game average.

That puts hime only a half-yard ahead of Bloomsburg's Mike Morucci, however. Morucci gained 207 yards last week against Kutztown to raise his season's rushing total to 775 yards in seven games, a 110.7 average.

In the scoring race, Strunk tallied three touchdowns last Saturday to take an 18-point lead over Kutztown's Don Shaver. Strunk now has 10 touchdowns and 60 points compared to Shaver's seven scores and 42 points.

Strunk's outstanding day against Cortland State earned him mention on the ECAC Division II honor roll. In addition to his 193 yards rushing, he caught two passes for 57 yards and one score.

The Warriors have one other leader in the conference statistics race. Punter Barry Kennedy remains slightly ahead of Kutztown's Fred Kushwarra with an average of 37.1 compared to 37.0.

ESSC seventh

NEW YORK — East Stroudsburg State College has moved to seventh place in the latest weekly Lambert Cup ratings.

The Warriors, now 4-2 after walloping Cortland State, 69-14, received 24 votes to climb from tenth place in the voting for the East's outstanding middle-sized college football team.

New Hampshire remains in first place, despite suffering its first loss of the season, 21-20 to Rhode Island last week.

The Wildcats received three first-place votes and a total of 62 points to remain slightly ahead of Massachuetts, which earned 60½ points, including one first place vote and a share of another with third-ranked Lehigh.

The Engineers received 2½ first-place votes and are close behind Massachuetts with 59½ points.

Trio scores Evergreen aces

ANALOMINK — The sixth hole at Penn Hills-Evergreen seems to be a popular place to score a hole-in-one.

Russell Irwin, in the company of John Eilenberger, recently scored an ace on the hole, a 175-yard test.

Other aces were scored recently by Leroy Hammer of Livingston, N.J. and Clarence Lee, of Clementon, N.J.

Reggie's not guilty in harassment case

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York Yankee outfielder Reggie Jackson was found not guilty Tuesday of charges of harassing 14-year-old Chris Howe in the parking lot at Yankee Stadium following the All-Star game on July 19.

In handing down the decision, Judge Harold Enten said: "With all the evidence given in the court today, I have a reasonable doubt and Mr. Jackson is found not guilty."

"For me personally I feel relieved," said Jackson. "But I feel some sorrow for Chris. I hate to see a kid going through what he did today. Let him grow up and have fun."

Howe refused to comment on the decision.

Howe accused Jackson of "stomping" him on the right wrist and causing a half-inch cut as a result.

But the judge believed Jackson, who took the stand in his own defense. Jackson said he had signed autographs for 15 or 20 minutes before a young man made an incestuous remark about him and his mother.

Jackson claimed he was sure it was Howe who made the remark and when the young man ran away, the Yankee outfielder took off after him in the hope of turning him over to the authorities. But, according to Jackson, he was restrained by Boston first baseman George Scott and a 6-foot-7 student, Gil Williams, and never did touch Howe.

"The press makes us public figures and I do understand that we have a responsibility to show the right way. But I think this brings to light that celebrities do have private lives and should be left alone sometimes," said Jackson.

Jackson followed Scott and Williams to the stand and corroborated their stories about what happened on the night in question.

Scott and Williams said they chased after Jackson after the Yankee outfielder started his pursuit of Howe. Williams got there first, grabbed Reggie and said, "I will catch him for you." According to Williams, it was he who grabbed Howe and the teen-ager fell to the ground as a result. Williams said that he served as a wedge between Jackson and Howe and that Jackson never reached the boy.

Then Scott came over, put Jackson in a bearhug and convinced him to return to his car.

Torrez rejects offer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mike Torrez, one of the top right-handed pitchers in the major leagues and a two-game winner in the World Series, has turned down a "fine offer" from the New York Yankees and will test his value as a free agent in major league baseball's re-entry draft Friday.

"We're still negotiating with him," said Yankees' President Gabe Paul Tuesday. "We made him a fine offer. But he wants to test the water. He feels there's more money around."

Torrez, who came to the Yankees from Oakland last May after signing a one-year contract, is represented by Gary Walker, the same agent who negotiated a $2.9 million contract for slugger Reggie Jackson with the Yankees last winter.

Under the rules governing the re-entry draft, no team other than the Yankees is allowed to negotiate with Torrez until after the draft has been conducted.

Torrez had said after the season that he hoped to be playing for the Yankees again next year but he feels his worth is more than the Yankees are willing to pay.

Veeck honored

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bill Veeck, the "Baseball Barnum" who proved that old champs can come back, was named Tuesday as the UPI's major league executive of the year.

The 63-year-old president of the Chicago White Sox was the overwhelming choice of the 24 sports writers who participated in the annual post-season survey. Veeck got 16 votes with Gabe Paul of the New York Yankees, who got two, the only other executive to receive more than one.

A flamboyant promoter who often offended the baseball establishment, Veeck returned to the game as president of the White Sox in 1976 after a 14-year absence. He took over a dilapidated franchise and promptly made a big mistake by bringing Paul Richards out of retirement to manage the team. 'Tis said, the fans, the players and the manager fell asleep during some games.

In any event, Veeck hired Bob Lemon as manager for 1977 and added such key men as Oscar Gamble, Richie Zisk and Eric Soderholm to the team. The White Sox remained in contention until mid-August and their record improved from 64-97 in 1976 to 90-72 in 1977. Their home attendance rose from 914,945 in 1976 to 1,656,135 in 1977.

Zisk's demands

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago White Sox President Bill Veeck and Jerry Kapstein, agent for outfielder Richie Zisk, were at odds Tuesday on how much money it would take to sign Zisk, who will be in the free agent draft Friday.

Veeck said Kapstein wanted $800,000 for Zisk for the 1977 season.

But Kapstein said, "If there is an implication that Zisk asked for an escalating contract beginning at $800,000 a year, this is totally incorrect. The final proposal to Veeck, when broken down on a yearly basis, would have put Zisk not even close to the top paid player in baseball."

Judge in 'sting' case disqualifies himself

MINEOLA, N.Y. (UPI) — State Supreme Court Justice Francis X. Altimari disqualified himself Tuesday from making a decision on Dr. Mark Gerard's application to have his suspension lifted at Belmont Park Race Track.

Altimari said he had listened to tapes of some secret evidence accusing the 43-year-old veterinarian of possible insurance fraud, and it later came to his attention that it might have been improper for him to have heard this evidence.

He said he believed he was entitled to have knowledge of this evidence, but since a question had arisen concerning its propriety, he disqualified himself from making any ruling on a motion to lift the suspension.

The case then was handed to Justice Theodore Velsor, who reserved decision after hearing arguments from both sides. Velsor denied a motion by Gerard's attorneys for a temporary lifting of the suspension until he makes a ruling.

Velsor did not indicate when he will announce his decision, but Gerard's suspension from any veterinary activities will remain in effect until then.

The State Racing and Wagering Board, which invoked the suspension, has stated that it has evidence that Gerard switched horses in a Sept. 23 race at Belmont and won $77,920 on a $1,300 bet.

The winning horse was listed as Lebon, a 4-year-old plater who had never won any major race. The board contends that the horse is actually Cinzano, a horse which Gerard claims was put to death on June 12 when he fractured his skull.

During the lengthy court proceeding before Velsor, one of Gerard's attorneys, Beth Goldmacher, argued that the board did not have the right to suspend the veterinarian before giving him a hearing.

Goldmacher maintained that the issue of any alleged criminal wrong-doing on Gerard's part is not before the court, only the legality of Gerard's suspension.

French President's daughter can cook

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — The latest French cuisine expert to write a cookbook is pretty, dark-haired, 23, and already famous as the daughter of the president of France.

Valerie-Anne Giscard d'Estaing has co-authored a cookbook for the younger generation that is selling briskly around France. Her partner is Sylvie Pierre Brossolette, daughter of Giscard's former chief aide who has since turned bank president.

The book itself reflects a social phenomenon of France in 1977:

Both girls' mothers had little interest in cooking, a usual trend in that generation when upper-class French women seldom ventured into the kitchen. When the two young women decided to master the art of French cooking, they chose a style different from mother's day: lighter, less fattening dishes that, for good or bad, are geared to working couples who have a fast half hour to throw together a dinner.

"Sylvie and I have cooked together since we were 14, and we took private lessons from a chef to learn classical French cooking," said Miss Giscard d'Estaing, looking very Parisian in a brown corduroy skirt, straight riding-type boots, bulky sweater and printed shirt.

"My mother cooks just a little. Sylvie's does not cook much, but in their generation parents had servants do it.

"We started cooking for friends and family. They were delighted. Sylvie and I in university got a little fat so we tried to invent new recipes that were not so fattening."

About two years ago Miss Giscard d'Estaing met a publisher from the prominent Fayard firm who asked her and Miss Brossolette to write a cookbook for youth. It was published in France this summer. As of this writing, it has not yet been bought for publication in other languages.

"We eliminated flour, butter and oil and use sugar substitutes. It's all non-fattening," said Miss Giscard d'Estaing. "The recipes are quick and easy."

The point of the book, as the authors say in the introduction, is that weight-conscious people in a hurry do not have to eat steak and salad every night. They, too, can eat good French dishes. They caution that, of course, an omelette made with butter tastes better than one in a non-stick butterless pan, and a sauce that simmers for hours is more succulent than those made at the last minute.

"The Cuisine of Youth" contains 193 pages of quickly prepared and allegedly nonfattening French meals, from apricot mousse to veal in vinegar sauce. Some recipes appear to have been simplified down to too few ingredients. Older, more jaded appetites might prefer more spices, herbs and wine flavoring. Many dishes call for a food processor, another cooking trend here.

One recent evening, for example, Miss Giscard d'Estaing entertained friends with a cold string bean and fluted mushroom (girolle) salad in vinegar and oil sauce, roast guinea hen with red currant sauce, lettuce salad, cheese and fruit mousse.

Valerie-Ann Giscard d'Estaing

Her father obviously has flourished on her cooking. He remains notably thin at 51. So does Miss Brossolette's father.

The president's daughter avoids talking of her life as a member of France's First Family. She would only say with evident reticence that "he liked the idea of the book but didn't say anything special about it."

The authors's family names do not appear on the book cover because "that's the way we wanted it." But thanks to their photographs in the book and nationwide publicity, the public knows who they are.

While she was working on the book, Miss Giscard d'Estaing was a budding politician. She worked for two years in the ministry of culture's monuments department. But "I thought being a civil servant a bit too dull" so a year ago she got an editing and reading job at the publishing house that put out the cookbook.

She said she hopes to make a career in publishing, with cooking remaining a hobby.

"But not always recipes from my book, my friends are tired of it," she said with a sparkling smile. "My specialty is souffles. It just takes practice and knowing your oven."

The president's daughter reflected that she has "mixed feelings" about the new "thinness cuisine" that is currently popular in France.

"It has some good aspects: lighter sauces and undercooked fresh vegetables which before were almost ignored in classic cooking," she said. "But sometimes the new dishes don't have any taste."

She prefers to cook from the classic French cookbooks of Escoffier and Larousse. Her favorite bistro-type restaurant in Paris is Le Gros Horloge on the Left Bank. For a grand palace of haute cuisine she prefers Taillevent.

When guests are expected an hour after the host and hostess rush home from work, the authors of the "A Cookbook for Youth" suggest serving citrons fourres au saumon fume, poulet campagnard and crepolette a la canelle: lemons stuffed with smoked salmon, country-style chicken and simple crepes with cinnamon.

First course: preparation time 15 minutes.

Puree 2 ounces of smoked salmon. Cut off the tops of 4 lemons and scrape out the pulp, reserving the juice from one lemon. Mix the salmon puree, a 3-ounce package of cream cheese softened with sour cream (the closest foreign equivalent to French fromage blanc) and the lemon juice. Stuff the lemon peels with this mixture and serve chilled. Serves 4.

Second course: preparation time 5 minutes, cooking 30 minutes.

Cook pieces of a cut-up large chicken in a hot frying pan, preferably a non-stick variety not requiring butter and oil. When chicken is golden, put it in a casserole. Add one-fourth pound of mushrooms, 2 chopped shallots, the juice of 1 lemon, 1 cup of dry white wine, and salt and pepper to taste. Cover and simmer 30 minutes. Serves 4.

Dessert: preparation 5 minutes, cooking 5 minutes.

For 1 serving, break 1 egg into a bowl; beat briskly and well with 1 teaspoon of cinnamon and one half teaspoon of sugar. Coat a hot crepe pan or small frying pan with margarine and add the mixture, spreading it across the pan. When the crepe begins to cook pour on 1 tablespoon of cognac and light with a match. After the flame has burned out, fold the crepe in two and serve. Make 1 crepe at a time and serve as soon as it is cooked.

Conductor Boehm makes recordings

BERLIN (UPI) — World-renowned conductor Prof. Karl Boehm is currently making grammophone recordings in the East German city of Dresden, according to East German press reports.

Boehm, a former conductor of the Dresden State Orchestra Staats-Kapelle, conducts a recording of Mozart's opera "Idomeneo."

Coffee prices may drop

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wholesale coffee prices are finally coming down. But when will prices on the shelf catch up?.

Both industry and outside observers say it should be any time now. For some reason it's taking longer for the prices to go down than it did for them to go up.

Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., whose agriculture subcommittee held extensive hearings into the coffee price situation earlier this year, says he fully expects to see retail prices of about $2.25 per pound, perhaps $1.99 on sale, by January.

"If not," he told UPI, "I'm going to raise Cain. I will call hearings early in January if prices aren't down."

Richmond thinks roasters are "working off some of their more expensive beans" now, and that's why prices have not dropped. He said major roasters promised during his previous hearings that retail prices "absolutely" would come down when the price of coffee beans dropped, and he will hold them to that pledge.

Robert Aders, head of the Food Marketing Institute, says coffee inventories that companies had to buy when prices were high should now be "flushed out rather quickly" because they are now able to buy coffee at lower prices. The institute represents chain stores and food manufacturers. Coffee traditionally has been a loss leader, an item sold at or near cost to lure customers into stores.

Both Richmond and Aders cited a study by the Council on Wage and Price Stability showing about three months are needed for price changes to filter down through the marketing system. On that basis, prices should begin declining in December.

Richmond also said so far this year only 10.6 million bags of coffee beans have been roasted, compared with 15 million bags by the same time last year. This reflects a drop in consumption.

"What's happened is that they (the Brazilian and other South American coffee growers) have succeeded in destroying their coffee market," Richmond said. "They've reduced consumption and got more people off the coffee habit. And they've made it more and more attractive for lesser developed countries to sell coffee."

Richmond said he cut back his own coffee consumption to "a couple of cups in the morning. I now drink iced tea the rest of the day."

"Hello?" "Hi Marge, this is Suzie." "Suzie, Suzie, Suzie! What a pleasant surprise!" "How are ya?" "I'm doing just fine. How are things with you?" "Oh, things are terrific around here since you left." "I'll bet. You know I miss you guys." "How do you like your new house?" "Oh, Suzie, it's terrific." "Did you get what you wanted?" "That and more." "Well?" "Well what?" "Tell me about your brand new house." "Suzie, it's fabulous." "Did you get the big back yard you wanted?" "Three acres with a pond." "Do you have a garden?" "We have a greenhouse!" "Do you have a nice kitchen?" "A huge kitchen with all new appliances!" "Do you have some aspirin?" "Aspirin?" "Yeah, you're making me sick." "You should complain. You're not exactly living in a dump." "How does Fred like his new job?" "Suzie, he's a new man." "He likes it?" "He loves it. Absolutely loves it." "That's good." "How is Jack?" "Fine. He's going through a do-it-yourself phase right now." "Oh, good." "Everytime I ask him to do something, he yells 'Do it yourself!'" "Oh, not good." "Oh, not good." "When are you coming to visit us?" "When are you going to invite us?" "You know you have a standing invitation." "OK, how about in an hour?" "I'm serious. When are you coming?" "Name a date." "How about in a few weeks...say the week of the 29th?" "Wait a minute, let me get my calendar...the 29th?" "That's a Saturday." "Yeah. Sounds good." "Okay, it's a deal. We'll be expecting you." "What do you want us to bring?" "Just bring your sense of humor." "No." "No?" "Just joking." "Funny." "You missed a great party at the Smiths' last night." "They had a party? They never have parties." "Well, they do now." "What happened?" "Well, for starters, Jackie's dog ran away from home and she had to look for him all afternoon." "You're kidding." "No. Then the air conditioning went on the blink." "No wonder they never had any parties. What did everyone do?" "We starved and perspired a lot." "Sounds awful." "Speaking of starving, how's the old diet?" "I'll tell you if you tell me." "125" "Oh, Susan! You've been cheating!" "No I haven't." "Well how can you lose weight if you've been eating?" "How about you?" "I'm not telling." "Come on." "One fxvie five." "What?" "One fxvie five." "Marge, you're mumbling." "One fxvie five." "One forty five?" "Less." "One thirty five?" "Well, that's not so bad." "That's terrible." "I know." "What's your excuse?" "A perfectly understandable insecurity resulting from having to adapt to new surroundings." "New surroundings. That's a good one. You know, carrying extra weight around isn't healthy." "Hey, look. Go easy kid. I don't have you to nag me any more." "Well, it hasn't been easy for me either." "Hey, Fred just walked in. He wants to speak to Jack." "Just a minute...Hey, Jack, you want to talk to Fred?...He'll be here in a second." "Hello?" "Hi, Fred." "Hi Suzie, where's your terrible husband?" "He's coming." "Here..." "Hello Fred?" "Jack old buddy, how are you?" "I hear you're burning up the track at the new job." "It's terrific. I love it." "That's the first time I ever heard you say you liked work." "You know I love work." "Yeah, I know. You can sit and watch it for hours." "Hey, I had an incredible dream last night." "Oh?" "Yeah, I dreamed I went to Coney Island of all places. I went on the chute-the-chute, ate hot dogs and popcorn, and had a ball. It was the greatest dream in the world!" "You think that was great. I dreamed I won the lottery for a million dollars." "Hey, speaking of a million dollars, how's the old ball team?" "We still haven't found your replacement yet." "I told you there's no substitute for excellence." "It's not that, it's just that everyone we talk to refuses to haul water." "Funny. Now that's funny." "Are you playing on a team now?" "No, I just haven't had the time." "Know what you mean." "I think I'm gonna have to bag it until next season. I know some guys at the office have a team and I think I can join it, but right now Marge and I are just too busy getting settled." "Well, don't let the old arm rust up." "No way." "Did I hear Suzie say we're coming up to visit you?" "I don't know." "Yeah, I think we are." "Great. You'll like it here." "I'm sure we will." "But I'll tell you something though, the people are not as friendly." "'Cause we're not there." "Funny. Hey, you'll never guess what Freddie's doing now." "What's Freddie doing now?" "He and the neighbor's kid are building a car." "Did you say building a car?" "The guy next door has a complete machine shop in his basement. It's unbelievable." "I bet Freddie went bananas." "You're not kidding. Instant friendship." "That's not a friendship. That's a merger." "I think between them, they have enough tools to supply the Army Corps of Engineers." "Terrific." "Yeah, I don't know what's going to happen to that kid, but I hope I'll be around when it does." "Big things." "No doubt about it." "If only his father were as talented." "Easy, elephant ears." "Hey, Suzie wants to talk to Marge some more. I guess I'll see you when I see you." "Yeah. Take it easy." "Good luck on the new job." "Thanks, bye." "Bye." "Marge?" "Yeah." "Now don't forget the weekend of the 29th. We're looking forward to seeing you and your new house." "We're looking forward to seeing you, too. Bring your diet calendar." "Right." "Wait a minute, Freddie wants to talk to Janey. Is she there?" "I thought he'd never ask. Jus sec..." "Janey?" "Hi Freddie." "How are you?" "Fine." "You wouldn't believe what I'm doing." "What?" "Building a car." "Building a car?" "From the ground up." "Oh, wow. What kind of car?" "We designed it." "We?" "This guy next door and me. His dad has a complete machine shop in the basement." "Oh, lucky for you." "I know." "Well, what else is new?" "Not much. What's new with you?" "Not much." "We should have the frame ready tomorrow." "Do you miss me?" "Oh, yeah." "Really?" "Yeah." "I miss you." "Well, I guess we better go now, eh?" "If you want to." "Yeah, my Mom wants to talk to your Mom some more." "Okay, Freddie, bye. I..." "What." "Oh, never mind." "Okay, goodbye." "Bye." "Suzie?" "Yeah." "I just realized something." "What." "The weekend of the 29th is taken. Fred tells me we have to go out of town that week. How about the next week?" "Fine with us." "Okay, we'll be expecting you then." "Good." "Take care, Suzie, and thanks for calling." "My pleasure. Take care of yourself. Goodbye." "Bye."

Woodstock visitors look for festival field

WOODSTOCK, N.Y. (UPI) — Woodstock Nation was a cultural phenomenon born in the mud in 1969. It was supposed to mean peace, happiness, freedom and no more war in Vietnam.

Woodstock Nation never existed except in peoples' minds, and the concept was embodied in the first major open-air rock festival that drew 500,000 persons to a field in Sullivan County, 75 miles away from the town of Woodstock, not far from Kingston in Ulster County on the Hudson River.

The field where Woodstock happened — shocking and thrilling those who read about it and saw it on television and giving those who were there a thrill of being part of history — is still just a rural field in the town of Bethel.

Max Yasgur, who owned the farm where the concert was held and who was made famous in Joni Mitchell's song celebrating it, died in February 1973. His family tried to give the field for a town park and was turned down. Bethel and numerous other small communities in the state passed ordinances to make it nearly impossible to hold Woodstocktype festivals again.

But in the village of Woodstock itself, where folksong legend Bob Dylan once sat recuperating from a motorcycle accident, people still come searching for whatever the mystery was that made the magic concert a byword of much of young America's culture in the early 70s.

"They're looking for the field," one local resident says. "They don't understand and you can't convince them."

Woodstock has long been an artists' community. It was in the 1920s. But since the music bash that took its name from the place where it was supposed to have been held, jewelry, leatherworking, painting and metalsmithing have become big businesses in the village. Shops line the short main street and a couple of side ones that shortly trail off into roads into the surrounding Catskill Mountains.

The normal population of the community is about 5,000. During the summer months that figure triples at least, and year-round residents head for cover. They give up on the idea of parking in the village itself and shopping is best done during the week because all stores are crowded on weekends.

Valerie Cadden is Woodstock town supervisor, and she says things lately aren't quite as bad as they once were, although there are still those who come and hang about the tiny village green.

"We did have a lot of people coming down until last year," Ms. Cadden said, "but we don't have as many anymore."

She said "word finally got out that the festival wasn't here," so some of the wanderers have stayed away.

Nevertheless, one woman whose daughter worked in a local cafe — and the village has several — said she heard numerous stories of people from as far away as Europe asking as they paid their checks where "the field" was.

The community encountered one very real problem brought on by those seeking the illusory Woodstock Nation — welfare.

A number of young people seeking something special came to the community, which has almost no jobs to offer, and promptly went onto the welfare rolls, which in Ulster County are partly supported by the towns.

"Everybody wanted to come down here and 'find themselves,'" Ms. Cadden said, "but they have realized we're not going to support them."

Officials estimated that at one point the town's normal welfare roll of one or two cases had swelled to about 90 a year. "That may not sound like much, but it's a lot for us," one observer of the local scene said.

The businessmen in the village say they're happy with the boom. Regardless of whether it's declined in recent months, people still come to Woodstock for its crafts and its playhouse.

The local people aren't so sure — "There's not the peace and quiet there was," one said — but they've accepted the new role and adjusted to it.

A number of known rock and folk musicians like Paul Butterfield still come to the area to use a large recording studio recently built there. As for Woodstock Nation, however, Vietnam is behind us, Richard Nixon is no longer president and the people who frolicked in the mud for one August weekend and showed the world a spirit that had been growing under its nose are older.

Water witch

OROVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — Score another success for "water witch" Vern Hook in drought-stricken northern California. A site selected in January by 70-year-old Hook for a well at Butte College is producing 300 gallons a minute. "The water just gushes," college official Jack Briggs said Thursday. "It almost flooded out the well digger's truck."

Scott's world

Full cycle for Elinor

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Elinor Donahue has come full cycle on television, virtually growing up before viewers' eyes from teen-ager to matron in four different weekly series over a 21-year span.

Elinor will be remembered as the sweet, naive Betty Anderson on the "Father Knows Best" show from 1956 to 1962.

She graduated from innocent daughter to a sheriff's girlfriend on "The Andy Griffith Show" for a single season back in 1964. Thereafter she played a friendly neighbor with Tony Randall and Jack Klugman on "The Odd Couple."

And now, running the gamut, Elinor is the mother in the new "Mulligan's Stew" series.

She plays the mother of a large brood in the series. At home she is the wife of television producer Harry Ackerman and the mother of four sons ranging in age from 9 to 20.

Because there are parallels in her series and private life, Elinor sometimes finds her new role a simple extension of her homelife.

"It makes it very easy for me to play irritation scenes," she said, laughing. "I'm really used to kids milling around. I react the same way to noisy children on the set that I do at home when my own family gets boisterous. It gives my performance an extra dimension.

"Most parent-kid relationships on television shows are idealized and far from true-to-life. This show is a departure. The scripts allow us to react the way irritated parents do. And sometimes I ad lib my own frustrations.

"When we made the pilot show one scene called for a couple of the kids to squabble at the table. I didn't have any lines. But I turned to them and said, 'Stop it,' just as I would at home. They left it in.

"How many times have you seen TV parents take over for their boy on his paper route? It really happened to me not long ago. James had to go off on an important mission of some kind, so I climbed on a bicycle and delivered the papers.

"It's fun to play a parent now because it's second nature to me. My sons see the show and tell me I'm really playing myself."

Elinor grew up outside the usual concept of American family life. She was the sole support of herself and her mother at the age of 5.

In the early days of World War II she signed with Universal Studios to star in a series of awful musicals with Donald O'Connor, Peggy Ryan, Gloria Jean and Rosemary DeCamp.

"I enjoyed the acting part of my life as a child," she said. "But I was always aware of the pressures. It wasn't choice on my part. I had to work for economic reasons.

"When my sons were born I decided I'd give them as normal and conventional a home as possible to make up for what I missed as a youngster. I quit work altogether for five years.

"I was happily married and there were no financial pressures. And I also felt guilty about taking parts from people who really needed the work.

"About six years ago I decided to try my hand again by limiting my work to a few weeks a year. I made commercials to earn some money and to have a little fun. I'd been turning down all kinds of offers for television series.

"When the casting director called me for a bit part on 'The Odd Couple' I accepted. It sounded like fun. They liked me on the show and wrote me in as a recurring character."

Elinor had second thoughts about accepting a role in a weekly series.

"Opportunity knocks on the door only so many times," she said. "Now that I'm 40 I decided to begin playing the career game again. This time, without the pressures I knew as a child.

New television series role changes actor's life style

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Robert Pine, who stars as Sergeant Getraer in the "CHiPs" series, has embarked on more than a new television series.

His whole life style has changed since he landed the role in the show.

A few weeks ago Pine and his wife of eight years, Gwen, moved into an English Tudor house in the San Fernando Valley and are still unpacking crates and cartons.

The first thing he did was roll up his sleeves to set up a wood working shop. He has an awesome array of power tools, all of which will be put to use on a remodeling project.

Bob has plans to knock out walls, enlarge rooms and make some additions to their three-bedroom dwelling. He is an accomplished landscaper and mason as well as carpenter.

He built stone walls, installed a brick patio and completely landscaped the home they lived in previously.

"We like to do things ourselves," says Bob. "And that goes for the decorating, too. I believe a home should reflect the taste and personality of the family that lives in it. Gwen is a marvel when it comes to putting a house together attractively."

The Pines have a philosophy that good antique furniture costs very little more than contemporary pieces and, unlike brand new sofas, chairs and tables, antiques appreciate in value.

They try to travel abroad, especially in England, at least once a year. During their trips they haunt out-of-the-way villages and antique stores looking for bargains.

Their prize piece, however, was bought right in Los Angeles. It's an enormous French sideboard, dating back to 1780, which dominates their living room.

The Pines are the parents of a daughter, Katie, 5. A pair of cats, Maxwell and Kasha, round out the family.

Gwen is an actress who supplements the family income with television and radio commercials. But she refuses to allow her career to interfere with domestic life. She does her best to have dinner on the table when Bob gets home.

Bob is up at 6 a.m. and off to work most weekdays. Occasionally the call sheet requires him to report to farflung locations, which means he must arise at 4:30. Usually he is home by 8:30, too late for dinner with Katie.

On those days when he isn't working, Bob and Gwen rehearse a play together for a local little theater.

Bob and Gwen share the cooking duties. In addition to broiling specialties on the barbecue, Bob is good at following recipes. Gwen's cheesecake is enough to send her husband into paeans of praise.

They're a sociable couple and entertain frequently. On those occasions Gwen whips up her own specialty, paella, or Bob throws a few steaks on the grill.

Because his state trooper wardrobe for the show fits him like a second skin, Bob keeps an eye on his weight. In addition to watching his diet he exercises every day.

He jogs regularly at a nearby high school track and plays racquetball with friends. Gwen stays in shape at dance classes.

The family enjoys weekend trips to Palm Springs or the mountains. On Saturdays a favorite pastime is a picnic at the beach with Katie. When Bob remains in town on weekends he plays softball with the "CHiPs" team. He's the pitcher and star.

The Pines like good music and have season tickets to the opera. Trips to the Los Angeles Music Center provide Bob the opportunity to dress in modish clothes. Otherwise he can be found in denims and sweat shirts.

Bob has sung in six semi-professional operas in Southern California and still plays the piano now and then, thanks to his parents who insisted he take lessons as a child.

A native of New York, Bob attended medical school at Ohio Wesleyan University but decided show business offered more excitement.

"I haven't any regrets about not pursuing a medical career," he says. "Show business suits my personality. But it does lack a sense of security that medicine would have provided."

Uses brash, often shocking, humor

Comedian Martin breaks age barrier

By WILLIAM P. MOORE
United Press International

Steve Martin struts boldly onto the stage of Pittsburgh's lavish Heinz Hall, takes a cursory glance at the ornate surroundings, and asks, "When are they going to get me out of these toilets?"

It is such a ludicrous complaint that the audience roars, and they continue to laugh for two hours at the comedian's abuses and insults.

Martin, 32, is quickly amassing a cult following too large to call a cult. He is booked in 50 cities on his current tour, playing the better halls.

In addition, he is the only person to have hosted NBC's popular Saturday Night Live three times, and has sat in for Johnny Carson on the Tonight Show more than 30 times.

"How much to get in?," he asks the Pittsburgh audience.

They reply, "Eight dollars!," and Martin lets out a conniving laugh.

No matter, the audience seems satisfied with the California native's brand of brash, often shocking, humor.

"Hello, and welcome to the show. My name is Steve Martin and we'll be starting in just a few moments. Just waiting for the drugs to take effect."

That type of joke is common with college audiences, but Martin's following is breaking age barriers. The visual part of the act is equally unorthodox, mostly Martin jumping from the stage, contorting wildly, or stealing items from his audience.

Prematurely gray, well-dressed and handsome, Martin could look quite distinguished if it weren't for the rabbit ears and fake nose he wears through much of the act.

His onstage character is the obnoxious, self-enamored, loud type of person you might meet in a singles bar, and his jokes are often just silly.

"Another comedian will do anything to get a laugh," Martin explained between shows. "But, in my act I think it is abstracted back to the point where the idea of someone doing anything for a laugh is funny, not the action. That's the way I like it."

He claims he is not being facetious when he says he has wanted to be a comedian since he was "very small," which is both a cliche, and a reference to one of the more popular routines on his new album "Let's Get Small."

Martin's agent, Marty Klein, first met him in 1966 at the Pasadena, Calif., Ice House where he was doing comedy and making balloon animals. Until his recent rise to popularity, Martin worked as a lead-in for small rock acts and wrote for television, most notably the old Smothers Brothers Show.

Martin's current tour began Sept. 14 and his popularity was best illustrated in Pittsburgh where a second show had to be scheduled after the original was sold out within a matter of days.

His humor has the admirable quality of appearing spontaneous. Even when he runs through a familiar routine, he fills it with freshness and surprise.

"Some of it is ad-lib, some isn't," he said, but those around him say new material crops up each night. Some jokes stay, some are used just once.

It is his delivery — he acts as if it is all just occurring to him — that makes a joke like this one, which he uses often, seem impromptu:

"People ask me 'Steve, doesn't it get kinda tough on you traveling around night after night, staying in a different hotel every night when you don't know anybody?'

"Well, I've kind of worked that out. I came into town early this morning, bought a house, met a cute gal, got married, had a little baby, and another one's on the way. Tomorrow, I'll wake up, have a homecooked meal, sell the house, get a divorce."

Then he takes a picture of the audience with his inexpensive pocket camera. "I paid $900 bucks for this. That too much?"

Sillyness, but carefully planned and well executed.

"I think we had a great time tonight," he closes, "considering we are all going to die someday."

Blue jeans cost her good job

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Billie J. Holbrook has lost her job because she stood up for a popular cause — the right to wear blue jeans to the office.

The National Labor Relations Board last week refused to reinstate Miss Holbrook, whose campaign on behalf of blue jean wearers in her Detroit office caused her to be fired in December, 1975.

A former administrator for the American Arbitration Association, Miss Holbrook nonetheless won her primary goal. Even before she was fired, she convinced her boss to lift his ban on blue jeans.

Miss Holbrook, who did not want to wear blue jeans herself, began a campaign against the blue jean ban in November, 1975, at the request of several clerical workers who complained.

She told her employer in a letter that she adopted the cause to teach "young minds to have the courage of their convictions."

The NLRB did not condemn Miss Holbrook's cause, but instead found fault with her tactics — particularly a questionaire she mailed to about 40 persons who do business with the American Arbitration Association.

One of the questions asked: "Should jeans be worn in the office of the AAA by (a) children, (b) monkeys, (c) directors, (d) administrators, (e) electricians ..." The list of alternatives also included dogs, Italians, the President and Xerox salesmen.

DID HAROLD A. THOMSON GET THE CRIMINALS OFF OUR STREETS? HE SURE DID.

The single best test of whether a prosecutor has done his job is to see what percentage of criminal defendants got convicted and put in jail. Compare the Thomson record with results in Monroe County.

Pike County (Harold A. Thomson, D.A.)		Monroe County (One D.A., Two Assistants)
1973	18%	1973	16%
1974	58%	1974	23%
1975	50%	1975	33%

(Source: Bureau of Criminal Justice Statistics, 1976 report. The 1977 report is not yet available.)

The sentencing judges were the same two men for each county. So why was the Pike County D.A. able to put away such a high percentage of criminals? Maybe it's because he's a worker. Someone who doesn't wait until the last minute to find out about his cases. Someone who gets results.

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Be especially cooperative with associates. Good team work will produce better results than lone-wolf action.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Persistence will be the key to advancing your personal interests. Keep trying and friends will rally 'round and give their support.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Sometimes your impulsiveness gets you into truble, but some spur-of-the-moment activities launched now could have surprisingly good results.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Your judgment vindicated. A message from someone "in the know" will confirm your own beliefs and consequent decisions.

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — Note the fine points in complicated matters, issues of importance. Make statements, decisions with particular care. Past procedures may have to be changed.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Your imagination highly stimulated and, while you may not capitalize on new ideas immediately, they should be highly productive in the future.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Work constructively, but insert a novel twist into routine to relieve monotony and make it more pleasing. You may renew an old friendship.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22) — Plan your schedule early and only deviate where a better arrangement is presented or discovered. Apply brakes sensibly in pleasures, risky activities.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — Do not go overboard in your enthusiasms. Look well before you invest time, talents, money. But neither be so fearful that you miss advantages and pass over good buys.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — If you do not notice "small" errors and where you miss chances for "little" gains, you will probably not see the big ones. Be alert.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — You may have to deal with some "odd" or unreasonable persons. Be tactful if you would learn how to "communicate" and solve difference.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Read Aquarius. Your outlook similar. Seek to know all you can about those with whom you deal, their feelings on various subjects, and express yourself precisely but considerately.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with remarkable intuition, insight and a subtle sense of humor. Although undemonstrative most of the time, you are, nevertheless, devoted to family and friends, and will never let them down. Extremely versatile, you could make an outstanding success in the business world, where your gift of leadership would be invaluable; can write brilliantly, and have a talent for acting. Also, like many others of your Sign, you could excel in the law (often leading to statesmanship) and are a born physician.

Opening lead — ten of clubs.

This deal occurred in a national team of four championship and resulted in a huge swing. At the first table, South got to six spades and West led the ten of clubs. Declarer won in dummy with the ace, East and South following low, and led the jack of trumps from dummy.

East followed low, but it did him no good. Declarer also played low and, with West showing out, there wasn't much to the rest of the play. South led a spade to the ace, conceded a trump trick to East, and that was the end of that. Making six for 1,430 points.

The play went differently at the second table. Again the contract was six spades, and again the opening lead was the ten of clubs. But when declarer won the trick in dummy with the ace of clubs East played his queen on it!

South then led the jack of trumps from dummy, exactly the same as the previous declarer had done. But when East followed low South went up with the ace and — sad to say — finished down one. The declarer at this table thought East's queen of clubs was a singleton, and that he therefore couldn't afford to make a safety play in trumps because West might have a singleton trump honor and give East a club ruff to put the slam down one.

It is hard to criticize South for falling victim to East's play of the queen of clubs at trick one. In retrospect it is clear that East's queen play was correct, since it gave declarer a chance to go wrong that did not exist naturally, and one must strongly sympathize with South for having fallen into a well-laid trap.

Stocks take steep plunge

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, stunned by the Federal Reserve Board's decision to tighten credit, Tuesday took its worst beating in more than three months. Trading, however, was slow.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 4.33 points Monday, plunged 11.44 points to 806.91, the worst loss since it dropped 19.75 points July 27. The closely watched average had climbed 21.14 points in the three sessions prior to Monday.

The Fed, which most observers thought had relaxed its policies last week, tightened credit Monday and raised fears the economy's recent slowdown would intensify. The government's leading economic indicators rose an anemic 0.3 per cent in September.

The Fed's move provoked Wells Fargo Bank, which last week said it could see no reason to raise its prime rate, to hike it a quarter point to the 7¾ percent level most banks adopted last week.

The dollar's plunge to all-time lows in Europe and Japan also contributed to the selling. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, noting the British floated the pound on Monday, said the dollar was reacting to market conditions.

Investors ignored calls by Charles Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, for "reductions and improvements" in business taxes to raise investment.

Also in the news background, the Commerce Department reported construction spending rose 1.6 percent in September following a 0.8 percent decline in August.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index fell 0.52 to 50.13 and the average price of a share dropped 30 cents. Standard & Poor's 500stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, fell 0.99 to 91.35.

Declines routed advances, 1,102 to 358, among the 1,856 issues crossing the composite tape.

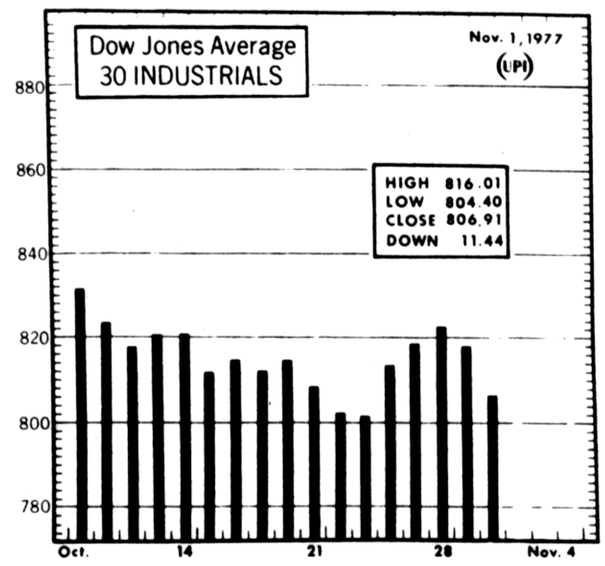

Big Board volume totaled 17,170,000 shares, compared with 17,070,000 traded Monday.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 19,827,210 shares, compared with 19,967,800 Monday.

Prices were lower in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange and over-the-counter issues.

Vetco Inc., trading exdividend, was the most active NYSE issue, off ⅝ to 23⅛. Smith International, in an amendment to an SEC filing, said it no longer was considering a Vetco takeover. Combustion Engineering recently made a $23-a-share tender offer for Vetco stock. Smith stock lost ¾ to 29⅜ and Combustion Engineering ½ to 35¾.

Firestone was the second most active issue, off ⅜ to 15⅜.

Vow to be back in 1980

Aussies still eying America's Cup

By BART KINCH
UPI Boating Editor

The America's Cup is safe — at least until 1980.

The long summer of sailing sleek 12-meter yachts off the coast of Newport, R.I., is over.

Newport harbor, crammed so tightly in September with thousands of yachts, seems all but deserted now in comparison.

Gone too are the August scenes of the white hulled racing machines being towed to Brenton Reef in Block Island Sound to hoist sail and begin relentless hours of sailing competition and training.

Ted Turner, who eventually was selected to defend the Cup in the 23rd attempt by a foreign country to wrest it from its home at the New York Yacht Club, drove his crew aboard Courageous until it was honed into an unbeatable team.

When the best of seven series of match races began Sept. 13, the months of training paid off. Courageous beat Australia in four straight.

During the long summer of competition leading to the selection of challenger and defender, a fleet of small boats, darting from Bannisters Wharf or Jamestown out to the cup boats, played a prominent role.

A terse radio message would be received at dockside — "We need a three ounce spinnaker!" "Bring us a genoa block fast!" — and a small, outboard-powered boat would head, full bore, for the sound. Often it was a press run, rushing photographers for their daily ritual of picture taking.

"You can't underestimate the value of the small boats," said Richard Sayer, a spokesman for the Courageous crew whose main tender, a 42-foot Hatteras, was backed up by a 21-foot Boston Whaler Outrage and an inflatible Zodiac.

"We used the Zodiac for harbor travel, but when we had to rush a sail or a piece of equipment out to sea, we called on the Outrage. For a small boat it performed magnificently, even in the roughest waters."

The ill-fated Swedish challenger, Sverige, which was knocked out of contention as a challenger for the Cup by the Aussies, relied on a 42-foot Uniflite as its main tender, three Bayliners in the 20-foot class and a 19-foot Boston Whaler.

Gunnar Franzen, who skippered the Uniflite, christened "Swede 'N Tender," said the boat was specially equipped to handle the needs of a 12-meter yacht. It had a portable sail bin and a complete metal, woodworking and sail repair shop on board.

The Australians, according to Bob Hemery, used a Boston Whaler for most of its tending chores.

"We used a 21-foot Outrage with a 175 horsepower Evinrude to support our main tender. It was convenient and did everything we asked of it — carrying special sails, gear, photographers and news persons. It was fast, maneuverable and stable and safe at maximum speed, even in rough waters."

The only team that did not use any small tenders was France, which relied on the Ninny, a 32-foot diesel cruiser.

The final use of the tender fleet came on Sept. 18, after Australia lost the fourth and final race of the series.

Pandemonium reigned when the victor and vanquished were towned back to Newport harbor. Bottles of champagne appeared as if by magic. Turner, grinning from ear to ear, toasted his crew, the Australians, his fans, everyone.

Cannons boomed, whistles blew and people lining the waterfront cheered and waved flags.

While all this was going on at Bannister's Wharf, berth of the Courageous, the crew of the Australia, led by Alan Bond, principle backer of the Aussie challenge, boarded their Outrage and headed for the scene of celebration.

With Bond standing like George Washington crossing the Delaware, the Aussie tender pulled alongside the Courageous and Bond and his crews scrambled on board. In minutes both crews were in the water as Aussie tossed American into the drink and vice versa.

Another multi-million dollar sporting extravaganza was over. For Bond it was the second time he backed an Australian loser. But at the final news conference that night in the Newport Armory, a wet, bedraggled but smiling Bond said:

"We'll be back in 1980 — and we'll win!"

V-8 inboard marine engine may be doomed by Detroit

By LeROY POPE
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pronouncements in Detroit that the V-8 automobile engine is doomed to extinction may also mean that the gasoline inboard marine engine is doomed.

Small inboard engines have been unable to compete successfully with the outboard motor for some years now, but the V-8 still is in demand for speedboats, sea skiffs, club launches and other small workboats, cabin cruisers and smaller sport fishermen.

But the blocks for these engines all are cast from molds made for auto engines, and if Detroit stops making the molds and casting the blocks, the manufacturers of inboard gas engines will be out of business in time since they are not big enough to support their own foundry operations. They can get blocks from truck manufacturers for a while, but the truck builders are shifting increasingly to diesel engines, which are quite different. In Italy, where gasoline is very expensive, even the outboard motormakers are turning to diesel models.

The American marine inboard engine builders will be forced to turn almost entirely to diesels if Detroit abandons the V-8, and that means yachtsmen sooner or later will have to repower with diesels, which cost about twice as much as gasoline engines. But the diesel lasts two and a half to four times as long as a gas engine, is a lot cheaper to operate and much easier to maintain once the boat owner has learned its mysteries.

More importantly, the diesel is about 10 times as safe as a gas engine because of the low volatility of its fuel and because it has no electric ignition. It may have glow plugs for faster starting, but the juice for these can be supplied by a little magento, so the diesel can be completely independent of batteries and generators. Small diesels can be cranked by hand. The middle-sized ones usually are started electrically but don't have to be; they can be started by forcing compressed air into the cylinders and the air compressor can be turned by a small handcracked auxiliary engine.

Diesel engines don't compress a mixture of air and fuel like the gasoline engine, they compress only air. Then fuel is sprayed into the cylinders and ignited by the heat of compression.

Diesels are made all over the world in sizes from under five horsepower to several thousand horsepower. Some are so big a man can climb inside one of the cylinders and stand on the piston top. On the other hand, 600-horsepower is about the limit for a gasoline engine. For some strange reason, diesel manufacturers rate horsepower quite differently from the method used by gas engine builders. Consequently a diesel six rated at 120 hp easily will do the work of a gasoline V-8 rated at 200 hp.

Diesels in the sizes used in yachts and skiffs burn a fuel closely resembling ordinary home heating oil. The big diesels used in locomotives, ships and large stationary applications burn a variety of heavy oils, including black bunker oil.

Unless gasoline prices go up enormously, though, the makers of large two-cycle gasoline outboard motors will benefit about as much as the diesel engine builders if Detroit really does abandon the V-8 gas engine.

Ceramic artists hunt 'treasures'

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Do you have any tomato juice cans, old New Mexico license plates, floor space or "cow pies?"

If so, ceramic artists at Pennsylvania State University want you, or at least some of your items.

The artists are on a massive scavenger hunt in preparation for this year's Super Mud, a national ceramics conference at the university Nov. 3-5.

They are seeking the floor area to be used for sleeping space for about 1,500 art students, professors and professionals from throughout North America who are expected to attend the conference.

For most of them, the star attraction will be a 95-year-old Pueblo Indian named Maria Martinez, who will travel to the conference from her home in San Ildefonso, N.M., with several members of her family.

The cans, license plates and manure will provide the material for building and firing a kiln for the legendary Martinez black pottery.

"Maria Martinez has really become a legend in her own time, and as far as we know, this is the first time that she has agreed to a demonstration of this kind," said Ron Gallas, one of the Penn State ceramics professors coordinating the Super Mud conference.

The Martinez family has sent ahead specific instructions about the kinds of materials they need for their kiln. They requested old license plates for building the kiln and said they'd prefer them to be from New Mexico.

But it's the manure — horse as well as cow — to fire the kiln that is giving the Penn State ceramicists the most trouble. The Martinez' have specified that the manure be from grass-fed animals and that it be of a specific density and perfectly dry.

The university is cooperating, but the weather isn't. It's been wet in University Park lately and the art students who have been assigned the indelicate task of gathering the fuel have had to resort to drying it in their own kilns.

Offer bargain air fares to Europe

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new "Bargain Fare" of 180 one-way and $350 round trip between New York and Luxembourg in the heart of Europe has been announced by John J. Loughery, director, western hemisphere, Icelandic Airlines.

In making the announcement, Loughery said "these new fares are for individuals and cannot be booked more than 43 hours before scheduled departure time. Returning from Luxembourg, reservations may not be made more than 72 hours prior to scheduled departure time."

Voice of Broadway

By JACK O'BRIAN

NEW YORK — Like Dublin's late Bob Briscoe, the Irish city of Cork now also has a Jewish Lord Mayor . . . Sophia Loren just switched her citizenship back to Italian from French; Carlo Ponti didn't . . . The grim gray Times adds a 4th weekly supplement — Sports, Mondays; then a hike to two bits . . . The updating from 12-year-old Liz Taylor in "National Velvet" to 14-year-old (going on 40) Tatum O'Neal for the "International Velvet" remake keeps Tatum's durable adjacency to film prurience consistent: Christopher Plummer plays Tatum's stepdad who writes a porno novel to make the tad's horse-dream's come true; MGM's Louis B. Mayer's rolling over in his Elysian stable.

The Shuberts invested $200,000 in the new smash "Dracula" — at the Martin Beck Theater, not a Shubert house . . . What Hath Pele Wrought? A new American soccer mag . . . In Chicago, Prince Charles saw everyone making a royal fuss over grid-owner George Halas and asked what George does. "Oh, he's just Papa Bear," a seminonplussed official explained, sort of . . . Billy Carter says he has a new "overdraft beer," to be called "Lance."

The Club Ibis raced in early with its New Year's Eve price: $200 a couple . . . The Waldorf with Guy Lombardo will top it . . . Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Paul Zindel (he fashions very sophisticated dramas) also writes children's books: gets $150,000 "in front" . . . His latest are "Pardon Me, You're Stepping on My Eyeball," and "Confessions of a Teenage Baboon." . . . Shelley Winters will bring a Zindel play revival to Bdwy. this season . . . Yikes! What Werner Klemperer is saying publicly (like to us) about the Times's rookie drahma crick Richard Eder. "No talent" is just the start.

"Valentino" about takes care of Nureyev's film ambitions . . . Baltimore Oriole hurler Dennis Martinez wants a show-biz career; plays gittar. His agent, will travel . . . Liz Taylor got a $12,000 gift fur coat before starting "Winter Kills" — which ran out of money and never was completed. Kept the coat, f'cawss . . . Shera Danese will be Peter Falk's December Bride.

Rick Nelson's split from Kris Harmon (Sportscaster Tom's daughter) is another California divorce (after four children, 3 to 13) in which they will go halvies on a couple of million . . . London's deciding how to chase porn-parlors — by hiking license fees from the pound-equivalent of $5 to $20,000 . . . Howard Hughes' first Las Vegas hotel-buy (The Desert Inn) folded . . . Ditto the Detroit Playboy Club.

Not a line in papers about an elderly woman bilked of $72,000 in a con-caper by two women she met on a bus . . . Hedy Lamarr and her new gent Tom Kefalas booked separate (of course) staterooms on a Jan. S.S. Vista Fjord cruise . . . Dick Cavett's Public TV series budget is $2,000,000 a year . . . Decades ago Harold Minsky's burlesque revues made daring headline-sensations; Fiorello LaGuardia even chased them. Harold opened his latest apeeling ("Bawdier than ever!") strip-&-dirty-joker at the N.Y. Playboy Club and as of this mo nary a paper noticed it.

MCA may buy New Times mag . . . Boy, can Lord Lew Grade sell TV series! His "The Looney Bin" was peddled to CBS stations everywhere — to start a year from now . . . Its airline owner quietly folded the Puerto Rico Americana Hotel . . . New flick titled "Elvis! Elvis!" isn't about Presley: it's a Swedish film about a seven-year-old boy . . . Magician Doug Henning alakazams Barbara DeAngelis into his bride in Dec. . . . You don't have to be Jewish: Sidney Poitier and his Joanna Shimkus at the Stage Deli ordered "A Shirley MacLaine" sandwich . . . And Candice Bergen midnight-limoed to the Stage just for an order of potato pancakes . . . Peggy Lee penned a kiddies' book.

For the Arab Who Has Everything: a complete Holy Koran on 31 tape cassettes for a mere $175 . . . We saw it with our own 20-20s: Sammy Cahn performing at the Rainbow Grill — got a Standing Ovation! And Sam can't even sing good .

Seeing-eye dog receives tribute

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — Sheila Hocken was 20 when a chocolate brown Labrador named Emma became her eyes, and much more.

Mrs. Hocken was blind virtually from birth. Then at 29, a "miracle" operation gave her full sight. Her reaction to being able to see was as unexpected as her attitude toward being blind.

Now at 31 she has written a moving and often funny account of both periods of her life, largely as a tribute to Emma.

"Emma and I," published recently by Victor Gollancz, places most of the credit for the normal life she lived while blind onto her remarkable seeing-eye dog.

"We were parts of a joint personality," Mrs. Hocken says. Sometimes it was hard to tell which part was in charge.

One day Sheila and Emma set off for their daily bus to Sheila's switchboard operator's job. Emma did everything wrong. ,

She turned left instead of right. She ignored Sheila's protests and disobeyed orders, dragged her bodily across unfamiliar ground and finally stopped — at the right bus stop.

Next day she did the same thing, only differently. Sheila finally figured it out.

"Emma, having learned a route, became bored with having to follow it every day," she writes. "So she invented variations." From then on Sheila got up 10 minutes early in case Emma made a mistake. "But, of course, she never did."

For more than nine years the blind girl and her dog made an enterprising pair. With Emma's help, Sheila lived in an apartment on her own, held a full-time job and sold cosmetics door to door in her spare time, met and married a sighted chiropodist.

But all the while Emma was full of surprises.

One day, as ordered, she took Sheila to a nearby outdoor telephone box. Vandals had damaged the phone.

"I felt terribly frustrated and, worse, had no idea what to do," Mrs. Hocken recalls. Emma took off, again dragging a protesting Sheila who was sure she was being taken home. The dog stopped at another telephone box.

Mrs. Hocken swears Emma could read her mind. She also knew every shop by name and "every department and every counter. I would have only to say, 'Find the food hall, Emma,' and I would be taken there with never a mistake and no hesitation."

Their partnership was so uncanny that Sheila and Emma became local celebrities. Sheila gave lectures on guide dogs — Emma loved the applause — and took part in public stunts to buy dogs for other blind people.

Once she and Emma raced a reporter across the center of Nottingham. Traffic stopped for the blind girl and her dog but not for the frustrated reporter, and he lost the race.

Mrs. Hocken does not conceal the appalling problems of being blind, but she writes without bitterness or self-pity. Her rapture at being able to see the beauty of grass, the astonishing variety of trees, the flight of birds is enough to make anyone think again about the gift of sight.

But as Mrs. Hocken explains — both in her book and in radio talks which have made her nationally known — her sudden ability to see was frightening.

On her first walk she was dizzied and terrified by the sight of "everything rushing by." She had to close her eyes and let Emma take over.

Everyday things she did efficiently while blind — cooking, eating, making her bed — were now blindering chores. She even had to relearn how to operate her switchboard.

"I had imagined that once I got my sight back, I would be able to see and that would be that," she writes. "But it was not the case. It was like suddenly being given an extra limb and having to work hard at getting used to it."

People's noses, including her own, appalled her and legs she found funny. The beauty of most things seen for the first time filled Sheila with wonder — and that included the face of her husband.

Emma had a problem, too. She discovered Sheila could see when Mrs. Hocken caught her at her favorite trick, stealing food from the cats' dishes, and shouted at her.

"It was as if someone had fired a shotgun," Mrs. Hocken writes. "She spun around and looked at me with amazement, shock, even a hint that she had encountered the supernatural."

From that time on Emma began behaving like any other dog, doing "things that the correct, dignified, working Emma would never have dreamed of doing."

For the past year Emma, now 13 and graying a bit, has been getting used to sharing the spotlight with the Hockens' new baby.

Bob Seagren, Olympic gold medal winner for pole vault, makes his TV debut as a gay football player in the controversial new "Soap" comedy series.

Farming students come from cities

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI) — The majority of agricultural institutions in the United States no longer view lack of farm experience as a handicap for students enrolled in agricultural programs, a Southern Illinois University national survey shows.

Dean Gilbert Kroening and Assistant Dean William Doerr of the SIU School of Agriculture says an increasing concern for the environment and world food and population problems have attracted urban students to agricultural colleges in such numbers that they now make up the majority of students enrolled.

South African ambassador challenges advice from U.S.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: In the following dispatch, the South African ambassador to Washington says if the advice of the United States were followed and majority rule implemented in southern Africa, thousands of blacks and whites could be killed, but not one American life would be risked. He also makes note of gains non-whites have made in his country).

By DONALD B. SOLE
South African Ambassador
Written for UPI

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If one leaves on one side the political pressures brought to bear on the Carter administration, both domestically and by certain foreign governments, it can perhaps be said that alleged lack of progress in race relations in South Africa is at the roots of the punitive action taken against the peoples of South Africa, implicit in the latest statement of U.S. policy towards South Africa.

Progress in race relations, as experience has shown also in this country, is intimately tied to the development of better standards of living for the under-privileged sections of any community. The pace with which such living standards can be improved is, of course, highly dependent on the state of the economy at any given time and South Africa is at present experiencing an economic recession. But if one takes a quick glance at the changes effected in the last five years or so, the improvement can bear comparison with almost any country which falls in the category of "developing countries" as they are known in the standard economic jargon. Nonwhite buying power has, for example, increased from $919 million in 1970 to an estimated $6.7 billion in 1977.

It is governmental policy to narrow the wage gap between all race groups and progressively to move, on the basis of a free enterprise system, towards payment of the rate for the job, subject to productivity principles.

Employers have been encouraged to develop and expand training schemes. Funds for education, still insufficient, have been more than doubled between 1970 and 1976.

Housing, although still inadequate, has improved out of all recognition and further expansion is held back only by the state of the economy.

In the field of personal relationships, any visitor to South Africa will note major changes as compared with only five years ago, particularly in the field of sport, where the progress attained in this five-year period in integrating national teams on the basis of merit and allowing the natural evolution of inter-racial sport is comparable with what was achieved in much more favorable circumstances in a similar period in the earlier history of this country.

The changes which have taken place with respect to improvements in living standards, wages, housing, training in industry, etc., are dismissed by our opponents as "cosmetics." But anyone who knows South Africa is aware that they go far more deeply than this, and lack of recognition certainly acts as a disincentive in some quarters to further efforts to effect improvements.

In any relationship between a superpower and a lesser power, the relationship normally comprises elements of stick and carrot. Since the advent of the Carter administration we have had the impression that what has characterized our relationship has been the stick with not a trace of carrot. Thursday a policy was announced which by the invocation of Chapter 8 of the U.N. charter, predicates the right of the U.S. and other governments in the United Nations to prescribe, in the alleged interests of world peace, how South Africa should conduct her own affairs. Implicit in this policy statement is the concept of progressively harsher punitive action if South Africa does not respond to external demands.

The thrust of present U.S. policy in southern Africa as a whole, as I view it, while dedicated to pursuing the role of majority rule, presumably because this is seen as a fundamental human right, is not characterized by an equal determination to ensure by express guarantees, that the principles of human rights for which the U.S. government stands, are in fact put into practice by whatever governments may take over in the area in question. On the contrary, it has been made abundantly plain that not one American life will be put at risk, although implementation of American policy could cost the lives of many thousands of non-Americans, black and white alike. It is claimed that United States policy is intended to avert racial conflict in southern Africa. In practice, instead of bringing people together, this policy, however well intentioned, is producing a far greater degree of polarization and thus rendering infinitely more difficult the process of achieving a modus vivendi based on evolution by peaceful change.

In the circumstances, what are we in South Africa going to do as far as our own affairs are concerned? My own conviction is that we shall display that degree of resolution which was so characteristic of the great World War II statesman who first made his name in South Africa (during the Anglo-Boer War): Winston Churchill.

We shall also remember the advice of Polonius to Laertes:

"This above all: to thine own self be true".

We shall be true to ourselves, to our African heritage, to our responsibilities to our fellow Africans- white, black and brown. We shall take our own decisions accordingly.

Won't drift quietly into sunset

Politics and the U.S. attorney

By THOMAS WEBER

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — U.S. Attorney Blair A. Griffith, who has taken on the high and mighty in Pennsylvania's Democratic state government, is preparing for a showdown with the Carter administration and a gaggle of powerful Democratic congressmen over political influences on the office.

A Ford appointee, Griffith has retained his job during the first 10 months of the Carter administration knowing that a Democrat could be named to the post at any moment. Griffith, who has the reputation around Pittsburgh's sprawling federal courthouse as a quiet, competent professional, knows that he'll be expected to resign quietly when a successor is named.

He has indicated he won't go along, forcing the Carter administration to run him off the property.

"If asked to resign I may refuse, knowing that I may be fired," Griffith said. "I would then, of course, be fired. In fact, I may request to be fired. But I'm concerned about the future of this office and the people in it.

"We have worked long and hard to effect an orderly transition," he said. "We have kept investigations up to date and tried to take care of the tough ones.

"I'm an individual and I'm entitled to leave office the way I choose to leave it. If I don't want to hold the hand of a new appointee, that's my business."

Griffith says it is "not unusual" for federal prosecutors to be replaced by an incoming administration. The long delay reportedly is due to a high-level dispute between former Pittsburgh mayor Pete Flaherty, now the No. 2 man in the Justice Department, and the area congressional delegation.

The Justice Department has refused to confirm reports that a successor has been chosen by Attorney General Griffin Bell, though federal public defender George E. Schumacher, 43, has been identified as the leading contender for the post. Under federal procedure, Bell will recommend a name to President Carter for his official nomination.

The nomination of Schumacher, supported by all six Democratic representatives, would be a political defeat for Flaherty, who came to power in Pittsburgh without the help of the Democratic organization. Flaherty's man for the post is Assistant U.S. Attorney Daniel J. Shapira, 33, head of white collar crime investigations.

Griffith was noncommittal when asked whether he favored Shapira to succeed him, saying only that Shapira "works for me and has done what I asked him to do."

Shapira was appointed by Richard Thornburgh, Griffith's predecessor who went on to a top-level job in former President Ford's Justice Department and is now a likely Republican candidate for governor.

But Griffith has expressed the gravest reservations at Schumacher's nomination to the job of top federal law enforcement officer for western Pennsylvania, citing a "close financial relationship" between Schumacher and veteran Democratic Rep. Joseph M. Gaydos, who represents the labordominated and overwhelmingly Democratic 20th congressional district.

"I don't like the idea of congressmen picking the U.S. Attorney," Griffith told UPI in a telephone interview. "We have sensitive political investigations in the districts of all the congressmen who recommended his candidacy.

"I am concerned principally about the close financial relationship Schumacher has with one congressman," he added, referring to an FBI background investigation which revealed that Schumacher's law firm had made thousands of dollars in payments to Gaydos in the early 1970s.

Schumacher maintains any payment "was proper and legal and for referrals or for work done."

"I was in private practice for many years, and I am concerned about that type of relationship," Griffith said. "There seems to be a problem in paying that amount of money to any attorney for legal work the attorney might have done.

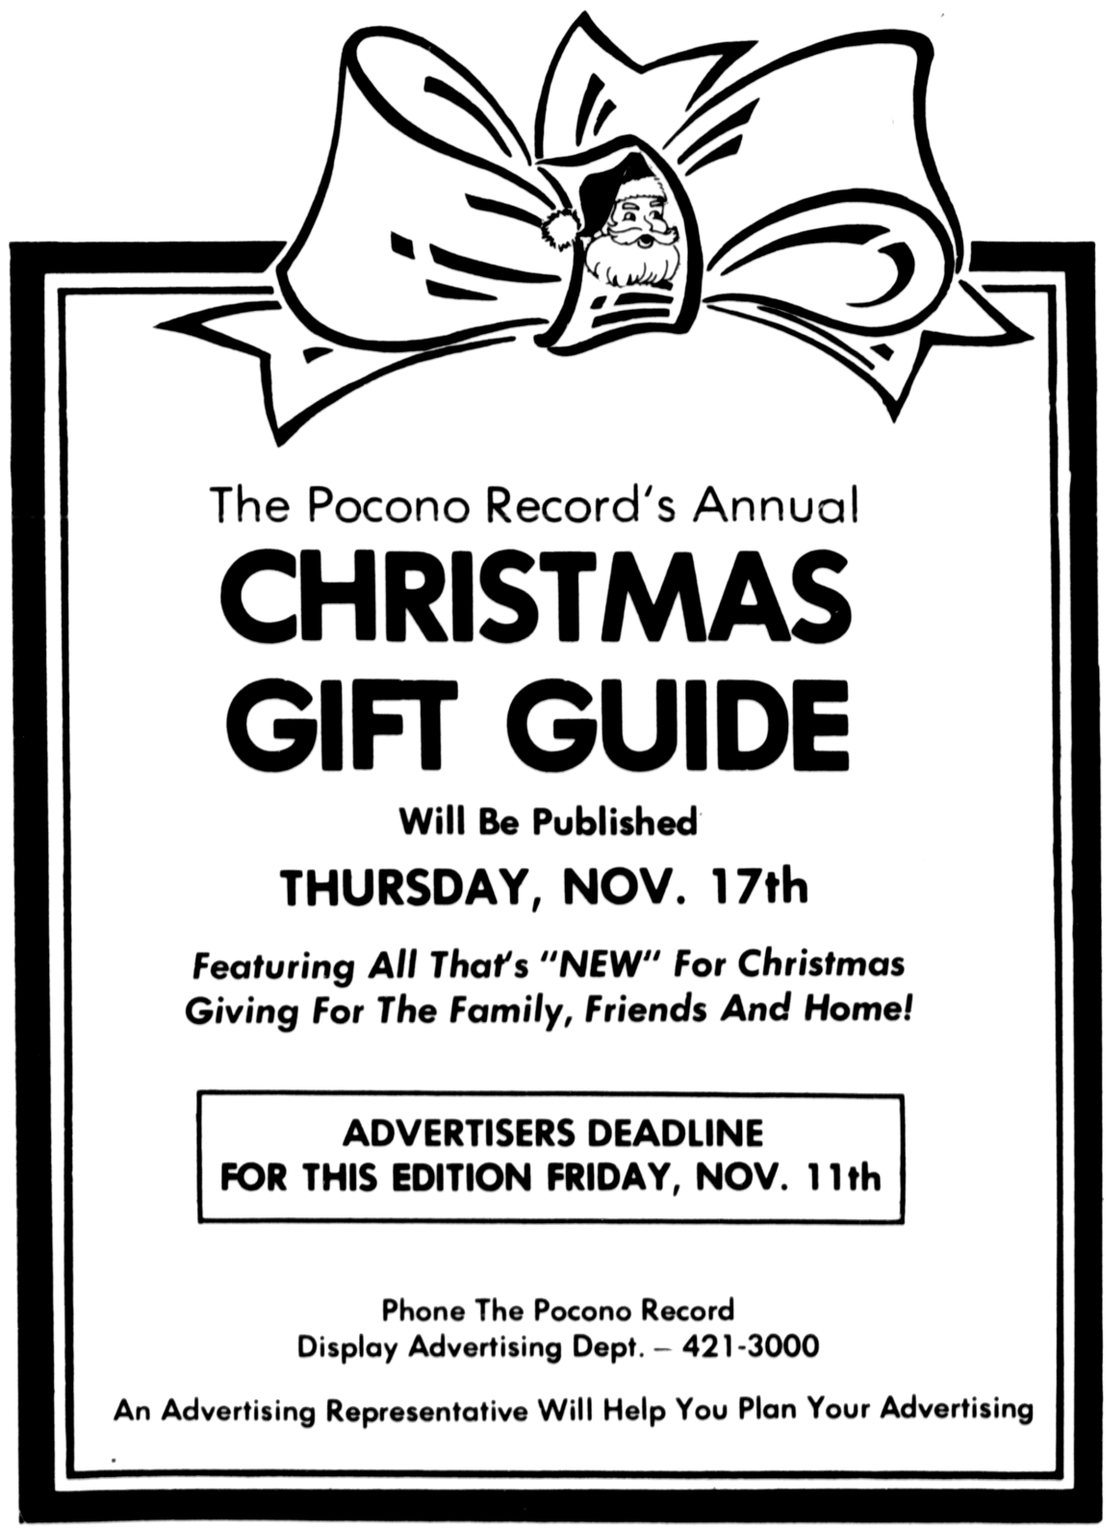

"The U.S. Attorney must be in a position to make decisions in the absence of interference from people to whom he owes allegiance," Griffith said. "I'm concerned by the public disclosures (on the Gaydos payments) and I'm concerned whether the Justice Department has given serious consideration to those disclosures."

Thornburgh also cited Schumacher's "apparent close ties to the Democratic party structure" and wondered whether the U.S. Attorney's office under Schumacher would be aggressive in prosecuting political corruption.

Unlike Thornburgh, Griffith isn't considering a run for governor. If he has any political ambitions, they're the best-kept secret in the state.

Taking over in 1975 from Thornburgh, who gave the office its reputation as a tough federal watchdog over state government, Griffith continued in the same tradition with indictments against state Turnpike Commission chairman Egidio Cerilli and state Revenue Secretary George Mowod, both appointed to their posts by Democratic Gov. Milton J. Shapp.

Trower breaks from Hendrix's ghost

Rewarding plunge into basic pop music

By BRUCE MEYER
United Press International

At long last, Robin Trower has broken free from the ghost of Jimi Hendrix. And the result is a rewarding plunge into the basics of pop music, an album called "In City Dreams" (Chrysalis CHR-1148).

Ever since Trower packed up his guitar and departed Procol Harum in 1971, he has been plagued by his own playing style, which by his own admission borrowed heavily from the late, great Hendrix. His music tended toward the avant garde side of rock and featured extended, often ethereal guitar solos.

That basic style remains more or less intact on "In City Dreams," but the music surrounding Trower's guitar is radically changed from anything he has done since Procol emerged in the late 60s.

It is essentially a straightforward Rhythm and Blues collection, punctuated here and there with hints of the recent past but mostly a positive step backward into what Trower says are his own true musical roots.

"This music has been with me all the time," he says. "That (R and B) is all I ever listened to as a kid — and I never listen to anything else even now. I'm a white guy from Britain who makes music that is solely influenced by black music and that makes me unique."

Trower insists he is not influenced by other white musicians, not even by the Beatles, the Stones or other key figures in British pop.

Just as "In City Dreams" is Trower's best album to date because it is heavily salted with unpretentiously simple music, the best tracks in the collection are those that remain closest to the black idiom, notably the Bobby Blue Bland classic "Farther On Up The Road" (which Trower says contains the best guitar solo he's ever recorded) and a delicious R and B ballad, "Sweet Wine of Love."

Ironically, many fans — mostly those who have not had the opportunity to see the band live — assume that the voice on all those records is the non-singing Trower, when it is in fact Jim Dewar, a Scotsman who has been with the group since 1972. Trower doesn't see this as a problem — it's his band and he can do with it what he likes.

"To me," he says, "Robin Trower is the man with the band. The fans can sort out who does what afterward. That's the way I wanted it, because I wanted to be free to change as many musicians as I wanted without endangering the integrity of the name. Most people relate to the band as being me."

Yet with this album, Trower's sound becomes even more strongly tied to Dewar's fluid voice than it was before. Dewar's role in the band — particularly from the fans' perspective — has grown with each successive album; with Trower, he co-wrote every original tune on the record.

And it's clear from "In City Dreams" that Dewar is more comfortable with this mellow new material than with anything Trower has done before. One suspects there would be considerable surprise and disappointment were Trower to exercise his option and change lead singers.

Fortunately, there's no indication he's considering any such thing. Robin Trower is no fool and he, too, knows when he's got a winning combination.

CONFRONTATION — Maybe McDonna, the two-year-old gorilla, was camera shy; maybe he was opposed to posing; maybe he thought the lens needed changing; or maybe the banana held by Hallmark's photographer Rick Lyons was what he was really after. Despite it all, McDonna got his picture taken for a new children's book called "Who Keeps The Zoo." The photo session was taken at the Kansas City Zoo. (UPI)

No Mrs. Bridges needed in this titled household

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — They say opposites attract, which may be why John Mortimer is drawn to Georges Feydeau.

Feydeau was the past master of the lunatic world of French farce. One of his most intricate confections, "The Lady from Maxim's," is now enchanting National Theater audiences in a new translation by John Mortimer.

Mortimer is one of Britain's top trial lawyers. He is also the author of several plays, novels, a travel book, and scattered screen and television scripts.

With his prodigious energy he regards Geogres Feydeau with awe.

"He was so lazy," Mortimer says, "that when a friend said to him: 'Turn around. The prettiest woman I've ever seen has just come into the room,' he answered, without moving, 'Describe her to me.'"

Feydeau, who died in 1921, was elegant and handsome. Mortimer is bulky and balding.

Feydeau, Mortimer says in the "Maxim's" program, wrote 39 plays "apparently out of extreme indolense." He sat idly all day in Paris cafes and lost wildly on the stock market.

Mortimer juggles two full-time careers with ease and has as much money as the taxman lets him keep.

Yet this mismatched pair makes an irresistible theatrical combination.

"The Lady from Maxim's" is the third Feydeau farce Mortimer has translated. He retains all the insanities of plot but finds apt contemporary phrases for the Frenchman's outdated slang.

Like all the best French farces — and Feydeau wrote some of the best — "The Lady from Maxim's" begins at breakneck pace and accelerates.

A respectable doctor, after an unaccustomed night at Maxim's, wakes under his sofa the next noon with a thumping hangover and a shocking young lady called the Shrimp in his bed.

Instantly this lady from Maxim's — who rapidly demonstrates she is anything but a lady — is mistaken for the doctor's wife. Just as instantly his religious zealot of a wife bursts in and is confronted by the Shrimp impersonating the blessed Saint Violetta.

So much for the first five minutes.

The rest of the play heaps complications upon complications. Feydeau's world is like that.

His main characters, Mortimer notes, are "sensible and detached, choosing a quiet life." But then unceremoniously they are "booted into a world of frenetic creation" which becomes, "at the drop of a coincidence, gloriously out of control."

But never out of Feydeau's control. His complex plots are mathematically precise and disciplined, following fixed rules. Feydeau once explained one rule:

"When two of my characters should under no circumstances encounter one another, I throw them together as quickly as possible."

The National Theater's new production — the first of this play in London since 1902 — is lavish with 32 actors, beautiful to look at and as sparkling as vintage champagne.

Stephen Moore is flawlessly desperate as the doctor, Morag Hood appealingly brazen as the Shrimp, and Sara Kestelman riccochets about the stage like a billiard ball, blind — as all good Feydeau characters are — to everything but her own mania.

Con'Puter run by inmates

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (UPI) — Con'Puter Systems Programming, a company which provides data processing services for other businesses, is run from behind bars — by inmates of the state's minimum security prison here.

Con'Puter pays bills, makes out payrolls and provides other computerized data processing services for its Boston area customers.

The company is an outgrowth of an intensive computer programing and maintenance course taught in the prison by Honeywell volunteers.

"Some of these guys admit they have never worked an honest job in their lives," said prison superintendent Jack Bates. "And now they have formed a legal partnership, they reimburse the state for costs of keeping them in prison, they send money home to families left on the outside and they have developed the motivation, working habits and skills which will be invaluable in making their return to the community successful."

"When they are paroled they leave prison with on-the-job white-collar experience which is impressive to employers," adds Richard N. Henderson, Honeywell's community services manager and director of its Massachusetts prison program.

"Of the 350 computer course graduates who have been paroled during the 10 years we have been running the program, 85 percent were hired immediately by computer companies and the remaining 15 percent found positions in other fields."

Get-away board

HULL, England (UPI) — Four youngsters commited Britain's first robbery by skateboard recently. The victim was Mrs. Ruby Chater, 59, who was walking along James Reckitt Avenue swinging her handbag.

The skateboarders, whom she described as aged about 15, swept past her from behind and snatched her handbag, which contained $11. "They were out of sight before I realized what was happening," said Mrs. Chater. "It was all so sudden, I was taken completely by surprise."

Theater world: Georges Feydeau farce at the National

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

NEW YORK (UPI) — When Pamela Colin left New York for London 14 years ago to work for British "Vogue" magazine and eventually marry the 5th Baron Harlech, she little dreamed she would write a cookbook.

The American-born author never learned to cook at home. Her mother, wife of wealthy attorney-art collector Ralph Colin, never had to cook.

But "she knew all about the chemistry of foods," said Lady Harlech, here on a nationwide tour to promote "Feast Without Fuss" (Atheneum, $12.95).

"I gradually learned to cook from friends in London and it finally became a passion, resulting in my library of 500 cookbooks, some of them old and rare. I do all my own cooking in England, which is fortunate in view of the simpler way of life there."

Lady Harlech referred to the contrasts in post-World War II Britain, "where household help is hard to find and afford," and the pre-war era of bountiful help. She said her mother-in-law, a member of the historic Cecil family, had a Shropshire country house with 42 guest bedrooms and over 50 servants.

"Now she has only a housekeeper," said Lady Harlech, "but she has been able to adjust, and she's 86.

"I don't have any help in the kitchen in our house in London or our country house, a 17th century manor in North Wales, and I manage quite well. We have smaller dinners than we used to, of course, and never formal. We tend to live in our big kitchen when we are alone in the country."

The author's husband is TV executive David Ormsby-Gore, Lord Harlech, former British ambassador to Washington and one-time escort of the widowed Mrs. John F. Kennedy.

Her book is designed for hostesses who want to remain in the living room with guests before dinner.

Approximate cooking times of under one hour, one to two hours, and over two hours are given with each recipe. Each also is identified as easy, moderately difficult or difficult. Dishes suitable for freezing are marked.

"Organization is the key to feasting without fuss," said the animated, stylish brunette.

"That's why I've included sections on planning a kitchen, essential utensils, and how to store them, and using herbs and spices intelligently.

"It should help women like me who have both a career and a family to have good food without hysteria. I wish someone had written a book like this for me years ago."

Lady Harlech said she spent four months "translating" the book into idiomatic American English and changing such terms as aubergine to eggplant and courgette to squash.

Many of the recipes bear veddy social British names — the Earl of Gowrie's oeufs en cocotte, Mrs. Jeanette de Rothschild's special stuffing, Lady Victoria Waymouth's burnt ice cream. The author denied doing this for "snob appeal." She said she obtained the recipes while interviewing notables for "Vogue" and felt it dishonest not to give credit. She writes a monthly food column for the magazine.

Lady Harlech is also a businesswoman. She designs for a travel and bedroom accessories firm she owns, and for Laura Ashley, a top accessories designer in Europe. In addition, she sits on the executive committee of London's prestigious Tate Art Gallery, of which her husband is a trustee.

Among her unusual recipes are salmon kedgeree (a spicy rice casserole), sweet and sour parsnips, and spareribs in beer marinade.

"If a hostess makes a determined effort to select good fresh materials; if she can depend on good roast meats, poultry and game, well-cooked vegetables and fish, and a half dozen dishes that are peculiarly her own specialties, she will give great pleasure to her friends," said Lady Harlech.

Some other tips:

— Never make a new dish for friends without trying it out on yourself.

— If a dish is a particular success, don't be afraid to serve it again to the same guests.

— Take care in inviting guests. If you can't find a good reason for inviting certain guests, or if they do not contribute to conversation and a general feeling of ease, leave them out.

HANGING FIVE — This new postage stamp showing Santa Claus as a "surfie hanging five" has Sidney, Australia's leading church clergy up in arms. Anglican Bishop of Sydney, Bishop Hulme-Moir, referred to the Australian postal department, saying "It is a pity, really a pity, they have not retained the real meaning of Christmas." (UPI)

Damnyankees play fine Dixieland

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
United Press International

Gene Mayl's Dixieland Rhythm Kings are a bunch of damyankees, but they are not carpetbaggers.

All of the musicians were born north of the Mason-Dixon line and only one, Ernie Carson, lives in the South, in Atlanta.

When they get together at a recording session and produce an album like "Down South" (Red Onion Records, Box 366, Dayton, Ohio), they will make George Wallace want to stand up and salute the North.

The music in "Down South" follows the familiar Dixie pattern — an opening statement by the ensemble and then solo breaks and a closing by the entire band. It's good medicine for tired nerves.

The cornet is the driving force of the Dixieland band and Carson takes control on such numbers as "Bourbon Street Parade" and "Is It True What They Say About Dixie?" He also can hold the notes on the slow tunes, on "Tishomingo Blues," for instance.

But it is not really fair to put Carson on a high pedestal because he is in good company with Hans Kuenzel on trombone, Kim Cusack on clarinet, John Ulrich on piano, Barrett Deems on drums and, don't forget, Gene Mayl on string bass and tuba.

Mayl, who lives in Dayton, Ohio, is no Johnny-Come-Lately. He has been touring the country with his jazz band since the 1940s. In recent years Mayl's band has been averaging around 40,000 miles, playing gigs in night clubs and colleges.

Other numbers in the "Down South" album are "New Orleans Shuffle," "Birmingham Blues," "Ole Miss," "Tin Roof Blues" (good clarinet break by Cusack), "Midnight Choo Choo Leaves for Alabam'," "Louisiana," and Mayl's own "Southern Sands."

Moving from Dixieland into pure country is not too big a step.

"An Old Timey Concert" by Doc Watson, Clint Howard and Fred Price (Vanguard VSD 1078), a two-LP album, contains 26 songs, ranging from "New River Train" to "Will the Circle Be Unbroken."

Watson, of course, is one of the greatest country instrumentalists, excelling on guitar or bluegrass banjo and in this collection he also may be heard on mandolin and harmonica as well as on vocals.

Howard plucks a good guitar, too, and is very much in evidence throughout, essaying the role of master of ceremonies. And Price fleshes out the trio with some dirt-kickin' solos on the fiddle.

This Vanguard twofer was recorded 11 years ago for the Seattle Folklore Society, but the sound is as fresh as though it were recorded only yesterday.

Among the numbers are "Sittin' on Top of the World," "Crawdad," "Corinna Corrina" and "Footprints in the Snow."

Mel Tillis offers a good change of pace with "Loves Troubled Waters" (MCA Records MCA-2288).

Tillis sings three numbers composed by Ronal McCown and three by Jerry House. It's a good selection and another steady performance by one of the fixtures of country music.

Foreigners take over Japanese TV ads

TOKYO (UPI) — What is Jimmy Carter, of all people, doing plugging brandy for a Japanese distiller from the Oval Office?

"Ladies and gentlemen," Carter says to Japanese television viewers, "the time has come for us to shed old customs and start anew. Let all people be friends together. Let us laugh together and drink together to freedom."

The president is sitting behind his desk with a bottle of brandy, a glass and an ice bucket. He suggests the brandy is the best on the market.

The man is not President Carter, of course, but Walt Hanna, who is described as America's No.1 Carter lookalike.

Hanna, from Beverly Hills, Calif., who did the commercial in Hollywood, is the latest addition to cut-throat commercial competition in the Japanese television industry.

Japanese television these days is filled with "gaijin talento" (talented foreigners) pushing local products.

Orson Welles, in an outfit recalling "The Third Man," also has been urging the Japanese to drink a certain brand of whisky.

Sammy Davis Jr., does a tap dance while exhorting viewers to drink a brand of booze competing with the firm Welles is plugging.

Yul Brynner has been employed to boost sales of a Japanese color picture film.

Laura Baugh, the American professional golfer who probably is better known here than in the United States, smiles for the television cameras while saying how wonderful a certain salad dressing is.

Hanna has been appearing on Japanese screens since Sept. 25.

"We have been getting a favorable response from viewers," said a public relations man for the firm which did the Carter commercial.

He said his company first approached the American Embassy in Tokyo to inquire into the taste of producing a commercial using a Carter double.

"We wouldn't dare employ a man for an Emperor Hirohito type in TV commercials," the public relations man said, "and that's why we asked the embassy if a man who looked like the American head of state could be used. The embassy said okay."

He said the commercial was shot in only one day, but would not say how much Hanna got paid.

Tipping becomes fact of life for travelers

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

"Oh, those waving palms," said my neighbor when I asked about his impressions of his first trip to Europe.

"Waving palm trees — in Europe?" I said in surprise.

"Not palm trees — the waving palms of waiters, taxi drivers, doormen, porters, chambermaids, concierges, etc., etc., ad nauseum," he replied. "Even when service charges were included, we still were expected to tip, and I got some dirty looks and angry murmurs when I didn't."

It's sad but true — tipping, like death and taxes, is very much a fact of life for Americans traveling at home or abroad.

And tips can add up to a mighty tidy sum — travelers should budget at least 20 per cent of their travel funds for crossing all those waving palms with silver or whatever.

No one knows for sure how it started. The most popular version is that it began in 18th century London pubs when waiters set up bowls marked "To Insure Prompt Service," the first letters of which became the word tips.

Regardless of when, where or why it originated, the practice spread across the world. It became pourboire in French, trinkgelt in German, propina in Spanish, bakeesh in Arabic and cumshaw in Chinese, among others.

But no matter what it is called, it often is no longer the original bonus for extra services. Tipping is expected whether the service is prompt or slow, good or bad.

There are no hard-and-fast rules, so Americans abroad frequently overtip or undertip, particularly when unfamiliar with local custom and currency. Compounding the problem is the almost daily fluctuations in the rate of exchange between the U.S. dollar and other currencies.

But a good rule-of-thumb when in doubt is for the American to tip as at home (15 to 20 per cent), keeping in mind, however, local practices which often differ from country to country and sometimes within the same country.

National tourist offices can provide tips on tipping, as can travel agents and updated guide books. You can also buy packets of foreign currencies from banks and international money dealers which include information.

At any rate here are some general tips which might prove helpful:

In Europe, most hotels, restaurants, etc., usually add a service charge ranging from 10 to 20 per cent of the bill (by law in Switzerland). But additional gratuities still are expected by service personnel. The concierge should be tipped for special services; in France he expects at least 10 francs (about $2) a week even if no extra services are performed.

Don't be afraid to ask whether service charges have been included before paying the bill. If not, tip between 15 and 20 per cent.

Taxicab drivers generally are tipped from 10 to 15 per cent of the meter — a little more if he helps with the luggage but not if there is an extra charge for the bags. If there are no set charges, tip porters at airports and railway stations the equivalent of 25 to 50 cents per bag, depending on the number and weight of the load.

Hotel bellhops and baggage porters should be tipped (in Portugal it is about 10 cents per bag; in West Germany about 45 cents per bag), as should chambermaids (about 30 cents per day in Austria and about $2.80 per week in Greece), doormen (about 20 cents in Britain and 40 cents in Switzerland) for calling a cab or other service.

Attendants in checkrooms and washrooms and theater ushers in most European cities are tipped — generally small change — if there is no fixed charge. Barbers and hairdressers expect from 10 to 15 per cent of the bill (up to 20 per cent in London and Paris).

Tipping is forbidden or officially frowned on in the Soviet Union and some East European countries. But travelers report small gratuities and "gifts" are accepted by waiters and others —and in some instances, expected from western visitors.

In the Far East, where the practice is still not as widespread as in the West, hotels and restaurants often include service charges. Otherwise, tip from 10 to 15 per cent.

No extra tipping usually is expected if service charges are included. And cab drivers in some cities, including Tokyo, do not have to be tipped — it is optional and I have had tips refused. In Hong Kong, however, cabbies expect at least 10 per cent of the fare.

In Latin America and the Caribbean, tipping is expected even when service charges are included. Taxi drivers and others also expect tips.

Service personnel on cruise ships and long-distance trains should be tipped, as should drivers and guides on tour buses. But never tip cabin attendants or other crew members on planes.

Innocent man wants to stay in jail 'home'

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. (UPI) — Ralph Lobaugh, who spent half a lifetime in the Indiana State Prison for murders a state investigation concluded he did not commit, has come back to the penitentiary he regards as home.

It could be a self-imposed life sentence.

Warden Jack Duckworth said Friday he still hopes to get Lobaugh, 60, to leave the prison, which has become "home" since he was sent to it in 1947 under sentence of death.

Lobaugh left the prison for an Indianapolis work release center Aug. 24 after Gov. Otis Bowen granted him clemency, officially ending his 30-year prison term.

Earlier this month, he transferred to a similar center in South Bend, Ind., where Duckworth said he had a part-time job cleaning a church. But he got depressed sitting around with not enough to do.

"He asked to come back to the institution," Duckworth said. "We will be asking the parole board to let him parole out to some place close to here, probably the Summit Farm, which is now a work release center between Michigan City and LaPorte."

The warden said Lobaugh had been assigned to the same trusty dormitory he lived in before he left. He also has his old job, working in the power house.

"I would say from the number of years he spent here he probably has a number of acquaintances with whom he feels very comfortable," Duckworth said.

"I think if everybody would be patient we will be able to get him readjusted. It's hard to slip back into society when you've been out of touch for so many years. I think shortly we can have him back out on a work release and eventually get him on parole."

Harold G. Roddy, director of the Indiana Work Release Program, expressed less hope of getting Lobaugh back into society.

"He just got nervous and real excited and wanted to go back to prison," he said.

Lobaugh pleaded guilty to murder charges stemming from the deaths of three Fort Wayne, Ind., women in 1947. He was sentenced to death.

Gulf Coast pipeline becoming 'Mexico's Panama Canal?'

By CAROL COOK

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexico's planned Gulf Coast pipeline is being turned into a political issue by leftists who are calling the project "Mexico's Panama Canal."

The pipeline, which should be pumping natural gas from Mexico to heat U.S. homes in two years time, is good news for the gas-hungry states — especially after the fuel shortages that resulted from last year's bitter winter.

But critics charge it is a giveaway of Mexico's oil riches and will make this country even more dependent on the United States.

Last May, the state oil company Petroleos Mexicanos (Pemex) announced it would spend $1.5 billion to build an 800-mile, 48-inch pipeline to carry gas from wells in the Tabasco-Chiapas fields in southeast Mexico to McAllen, Tex.

Pemex said it expected to have one billion cubic feet of surplus gas a day available for export to the United States in 1979, and enough to double that amount in 1981.

Pemex Jorge Diaz Serrano, testified before the Mexican Chamber of Deputies last week to counter critics of the pipeline. He pointed out it will earn Mexico $2 billion a year from gas sales, and he warned that if Mexico does not use fuel exports to finance its development, the nation will "pay a high political and social cost."

But oil has always been a sensitive political issue in Mexico. Appropriation of foreign oil companies by President Lazaro Cardenas in 1938 is still a source of great national pride — no politician can afford to hint that Mexico might be giving away control of its oil riches.

During the Luis Echeverria administration, officials were reticient about the extent of Mexico's oil wealth. Policy was determined on the premise that domestic needs come before exports.

But when Jose Lopez Portillo took over the presidency last Dec. 1 — with a severe economic crisis and peso devaluation to contend with — the government began to talk openly about its oil wealth.

And to tranquilize those who believe Mexico might soon run out of oil if it sells too much to the United States, Diaz Serrano revealed last week that Mexico has an estimated 120 billion barrels in "potential reserves" of gas and oil — enough to last for 280 years.

If proven true, as oil experts believe it will be, Mexico would be second only to Saudi Arabia among world petroleum powers. Saudi Arabia has estimated reserves of 148 billion barrels.

This latest estimate might dilute criticism from the left but — given the nationalistic appeal — it will hardly halt it completely.

"Now we are dependent on (the United States) for 70 per cent of our trade and if we sell them so much petroleum and gas our dependence will increase to 86 per cent," Heberto Castillo, president of the Mexican Workers Party wrote recently.

"...In my judgement, (the pipeline) compromises the sovereignty of this country," Castillo said. "Has (the government) forgotten about Panama, Guantanamo, Puerto Rico, Vietnam," Castillo asked.

President Jose Lopez Portillo has countered by calling such critics xenophobes.

The government says that if the gas — associated with extraction of oil — is not sold, it will have to be burned.

"Mexico has to negotiate with petrochemicals and natural gas with the United States, and if not, gas will continue going to waste," Lopez Portillo said recently.

Japan moves into digital technology

NEW YORK (UPI) — Japan seeks a major position by 1980 as a worldwide supplier of digital electronics, says Electronics Magazine.

'Japan's move into digital technology involves two thrusts, says the McGraw-Hill magazine: the first, an immediate attack by Japan's electronics manufacturers on the digital components market now dominated by U.S. semiconductor manufacturers. The second, "The designing of a line of Very Large Scale Integration (VLSI) computers 100 times more powerful than the technology represented by the IBM 370."

Substitute for wood furniture

By NICK GREGORY

CHICAGO (UPI) — A new substitute for expensive wood furniture construction could stimulate more interest in furniture design than any development in recent years, according to its developer.

Masonite, developed by Chicago-based Masonite Corp., is made from an old product — fiberboard.

Its use up to now has been confined to wallboard, but the firm hopes the interest shown by furniture designers and manufacturers will reduce its dependency on the construction industry.

The Masonite process gives fiberboard a three-dimensional, wood grain appearance through a compressed molding process, which the firm is attempting to patent. The product not only looks and feels like wood, it can be stained or lacquered the same as wood.

Larry Poe, Masonite vice president in charge of industrial and furniture components, said inquiries have been frequent and from many different sources and may stimulate more interest in furniture design than any development in recent years.

"The product will give the designer a great deal more flexibility and the customer a wider selection."

The process embosses the edges to make the product ideal as a replacement for plastic or expensive hardwood for use as table tops, cabinet drawers and drawer fronts.

"Another strong advantage in the process is that it will allow a manufacturer to mix surfaces for in-lays," Poe said. "A coffee table with a wooden frame can be designed with a top consisting of non-wood inlays — butcher block, cork, linen, slate, burlap or any combination — with the compressed fiberboard."

He said this means that furniture manufacturers can introduce many interesting, intricate and attractive patterns that are "prohibitively expensive to use in pure wood."

Poe said cost of making molds for the new process is about one-half of that for producing the parts in plastic.

Masonite expects the new product to be profitable from the start and to become a hefty contributor to the firm's overall financial picture in three to five years.

Production is scheduled to begin in December when Masonite opens a new 45,000 square foot factory in Oxford, N.C. The firm plans to expand to 200 employes and 125,000 square feet.

"Two major furniture manufacturers would like to have exclusive rights," Poe said. "That won't happen because this product has wide enough appeal for the entire industry."

But there will be a built-in degree of exclusivity for Masonite customers because each will be required to submit a scale model of any piece they would like to order.

"We'd make the mold, which would be ours," Poe said. "We wouldn't use it for anyone but the customer who submitted the model and chances of two manufacturers submitting the identical design are virtually non-existent."

Each mold would allow Masonite to produce hundreds of thousands of parts for repeat orders, Poe said.

In addition to giving designers a great deal more flexibility the process should bring prices for attractive furniture within reach of a lot more consumers, Poe said.

Brazilian generals in not so quiet war of succession

By GUY GUGLIOTTA

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — The generals of Brazil usually manage to select the country's next president with a minimum of fuss and an outward show of unanimity.

But an unprecedented public confrontation within the government hierarchy has already made a mess of the succession problem, even though the scheduled transfer of power is still 17 months away.

On Oct. 12 President Ernesto Geisel made "a decision of a personal nature" and fired Army Minister Gen. Silvio Frota, the leader of Brazil's hardline right and a leading contender in the army's efforts to find Geisel's successor.

Ordinarily, protocol and fealty to army solidarity would dictate that Frota pass quietly into retirement, keeping his lips sealed and his opinions to himself.

Instead, he delivered a 3,000-word manifesto attacking Geisel and the military government for tolerating "reactionary and subversive groups" and allowing "Communist infiltration of the press, among students and even in the regime itself."

This denunciation, unprecedented in 13 years of military rule in Brazil, immediately prompted speculation that Frota was trying to provoke the right wing and reimpose tight dictatorial controls that had been loosened by Geisel.

But Frota, his message delivered, went home to Rio. The Geisel government did not discipline him and acted as if the manifesto had never been published.

On the surface, the firing effectively eliminated Frota from contention in the generals' succession sweepstakes and appeared to open the way for the relatively moderate Gen. Joao Batista Figueiredo, the chief of Brazil's National Intelligence Service who is widely touted as Geisel's personal choice.

But no matter who gets tapped, the incident showed that the military's carefully cultivated system of quiet negotiation to pick a new president from among the nation's high ranking generals had sufferred a sudden and severe embarrassment.

Geisel's government has relaxed the heavy censorhip that muted the Brazilian press for years after the 1964 coup, and politicians, although they have little actual power, are far more ready to voice their opinions than in the past.

Backers within the military government promoted both Frota and Figueiredo for president through different civilian political factions, and the presidential succession received constant and ample media coverage. This had never been allowed before.

The Frota firing thus demonstrated that the general's dirty laundry can receive an enthusiastic public airing by a press and public fully conscious of their new freedon of expression.

Geisel, apparently realizing that the publicity was fouling up the secretive presidential selection process, cautioned soldier and civilian alike in the note that accompanied the Frota firing, ordering "reaffirmation" that he "has never authorized any move to name future candidates."

Electioneering in congress stopped. The Rio newspaper O Jornal do Brasil ran the headline "Succession Debate Returns to Square One."

Frota's successor, Gen. Fernando Bethlem, met with Geisel, then told newsmen,, "The army must not interfere in the succession problem." The implication was that the choice of candidate is entirely up to the current president.

In fact, Geisel will consult with the army's top generals before they settle on a consensus "official candidate," but he has reaffirmed, at least for now, that the choice of a Brazilian president is still not the public's business.

'Ice pick' surgery rejected

By DANIEL F. GILMORE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Newly-released CIA documents on mind and behavior experiments show the agency considered — then apparently rejected — "ice pick" surgery on the brain to "dispose" of intelligence adversaries, according to the weekly newsletter Science Trends.

The newsletter said it had obtained details of the CIA's mind and behavior control experiments of the 1950s era under a Freedom of Information Act.

The "ice pick" operation — technnically a lobotomy — "was apparently rejected on the grounds that it would be inhumane and risky and would probably invite 'horrible reprisals'," Science Trends said.

Nevertheless, the CIA continued to investigate the use of "chemical lobotomy" through drugs, as well as applications of hypnosis, isolation and other means of producing amnesia, it said.

The agency's mind control experiments were carried out, Science Trends said, despite a CIA analysis noting "our professional consultants support the ... view that short of cutting a subject's throat, true amnesia cannot be guaranteed."

The documents, the newsletter said, noted that one of the major difficulties in intelligence operations was "the problem of disposal" which "does not mean shooting a subject by our standards."

That left the agency with the problem of placing the objectionable or treated subject somewhere through confinement or re-resettlement, "ensuring his adherence to our views" and—or "preventing his giving away our secrets."

"A number of individuals who are fully cognizant of the disposal problem suggested that lobotomy or one of the related operations might be the answer, or at least a partial solution," the document was quoted as saying.

Science Trends said the documents to which it had access "include a number of bizarre concepts which were studied, and some tested."

They included:

—Placing subjects in a quaking rubber room to produce overanxiety and emotional instability.

—Injecting forms of cocaine into a suspect's brain through holes in the skull. Considered "too surgical for our use."

—Odors. The documents said terror has been produced by exposing a subject to a harmless odor, such as geranium, simulating the smell of a lethal gas.

"The documents indicate that CIA officials agreed to conduct further research but do not show whether or not so-called 'terminal' experiments ... were conducted," the weekly said.

Center windows cover six miles

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Looks can clearly be deceiving, especially if you're a window washer at Crown Center, the $350 million urban development being built near the downtown area here by Hallmark Cards.

At first glance the development's low-rise office complex looks like a simple window-washing assignment. The modern, seven-story building stretches less than 600 feet across a landscaped square; the windows on each floor are only three and a half feet high. But the windows run in horizontal spans around each floor and that's the rub — about six miles worth for the development's window cleaning firm.

Robert Price

SAN ANTONIO — Airman Robert B. Price, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Price of Honesdale R.D. 1, has been selected for technical training at Sheppard AFB, Tex., in the Air Force aircraft maintenance field.

The airman recently completed basic training at Lackland AFB, Tex., and studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special instruction in human relations. Completion of this training earned the individual credits towards an associate in applied science degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

Airman Price is a 1977 graduate of Wayne Highlands High School.

James Miller

SAN ANTONIO — Airman James R. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Miller of Cresco, has been selected for technical training at Sheppard AFB, Tex., in the Air Force aircraft maintenance field.

The airman recently completed basic training at Lackland AFB, Tex., and studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special instruction in human relations. Completion of this training earned the individual credits towards an associate in applied science degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

Airman Miller is a 1977 graduate of Pocono Mountain High School, Swiftwater.

Thomas Martzen

DENVER, Colo. — An official at Lowry AFB, Colo., has announced the graduation of Airman Thomas C. Martzen from the U.S. Air Force's munitions maintenance specialist course conducted by the Air Training Command.

Airman Martzen, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Martzen Sr. of 150 Belmont St., Waymart, is now trained to inspect, assemble and dispose of explosive munitions, and will serve at George AFB, Calif. Completion of the course earned the individual credits toward an associate in applied science degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

The airman, a 1976 high school graduate, entered the Air Force in July of this year.

WHO HAS EARNED THE RIGHT TO BE CALLED — "JUDGE"?

- ★ The one who has served his community well.
- ★ Someone the people have met, and not just heard about in advertisements.
- ★ A hard worker.
- ★ A man with the kind of basic, traditional values we have always expected of our judges.
- ★ An attorney with experience in the everyday work of our courts.

Worried about answering a blind box number ad?
(because you don't know who the advertiser is?)

If you are worried about answering one of these blind ads — since it may be your own firm — simply do this: Place your letter of application in an envelope addressed to the box number and seal it. Then put the envelope in another envelope addressed to the Classified Dept., The Pocono Record, and enclose the names you do NOT want to receive your reply. If one of the companies (or individuals) you listed placed the ad, we will simply discard your reply.
Sorry, but we cannot return your letter without violating the confidence of our advertisers.

Congressman goes after Torrijos

By STEVE GERSTEL

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On both sides, the fight over ratification of the Panama Canal treaties has become a no-holds-barred brawl.

Even the old Duke — John Wayne — has saddled up one more time to ride into battle on the side of the administration.

The lines are being drawn as the two sides — months in advance of a Senate vote — seek to fire grassroots support around the country.

Into this already delicate political situation, some opponents of the pacts have injected a completely alien factor — the moral character of Panamanian strongman Omar Torrijos.

The allegations surfaced by high-ranking conservatives are that Torrijos and members of his family are multi-kilo deep in drug trafficking. Torrijos, in a recent interview with the Washington Star, denied the allegations.

And, indeed, the conservatives have not come up with any solid evidence that Torrijos himself is in the drug business. What they do have is purported copies of intelligence reports from the Drug Enforcement Administration which could raise suspicions.

One quotes a confidential source who claims that one Ramiro Rivas, also a Panamanian, told him that he was in partnership with Torrijos in trafficking of drugs. Another has him linked with one Frank Marshall Jiminez in the same kind of business.

Although the evidence is skimpy at best, it was enough for Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to ask Attorney General Griffin Bell to explain what has been done to investigate the allegations.

"Unless this matter is fully aired, the American people will never accept any agreement with the Republic of Panama which is tainted at the very source by such allegations," Helms wrote to Bell.

Noting that a great deal of heroin and cocaine comes into the United States through Panama, according to a 1973 House subcommittee report, Helms added, "The question of whether General Torrijos and his immediate family condone this trafficking or participate in it is of crucial importance to the American people."

Although it is perfectly proper for opponents of the treaties to be shocked at the allegations, their revulsion should have no bearing on the pacts. It has to be presumed that supporters, including President Carter, aren't in favor of the drug trade either.

The two Panama Canal treaties — one which turns over operation of the Canal to Panama until the year 2,000 and then turns it over to that country — is an agreement between two nations.

It is not an agreement between Carter and Torrijos and therefore should be judged on what it provides. If it is rejected or sent back for renegotiation, it should be on the basis of the defects in the pacts and not on what kind of man Torrijos is.

Certainly not Carter and presumably not Torrijos — although political lives are unpredictable in Central and South American — are going to be in power when the year 2,000 arrives.

So what Torrijos does as a sideline, even if he has one, has no bearing.

But as a maneuver, the floating of the allegations by the opponents and their demand that Bell open the files on the Panama Connection is good politics.

With the outcome so in doubt, almost anything can tip the balance.

President delays tax overhaul

By JAMES HILDRETH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, who has no interest in ruffling the feathers of key congressmen and business leaders, has decided now is not the time to seek a wide-ranging overhaul of the nation's tax system.

The decision, announced last Thursday, does not mean that taxpayers — both individuals and corporate — have no hope of receiving some sort of tax relief next year.

However, such Carter campaign pledges as elimination of capital gains preference and the "double taxation" of corporation profits may not surface until a new Congress is elected and takes office in 1979, according to administration tax planners.

Carter originally intended to submit all of his tax legislation to Congress by mid-summer, despite the lack of consensus within his own administration on what it should include or what size the tax cuts should be.

The self-imposed deadline was pushed back to this fall. During the final week of September, a key Treasury Department official said the package would be submitted to Capitol Hill on Oct. 17.

Meanwhile, two other developments occurred that prominently figured into the President's thinking and derailed the timetable.

Congress became bogged down on energy and Social Security legislation, and the economy turned somewhat sour.

Carter also received word that Congress wanted the tax proposals to be "simple" and more easily digestable on Capitol Hill. Such exotic items as the possible trimming of existing export subsidies were clearly not welcome.

The business community, supported by Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns, added to the uncertain atmosphere at the White House by criticizing the administration's "confusing and somewhat incoherent" economic cures.

MERCHANDISE PRIZES OF $200 • $100 • $50 • $20 $15 • $10 • $5 • $2 • $1

IT'S EASY, IT'S FUN TO PLAY "MAKE MONEY"

NOTHING TO BUY! ADULTS ONLY!

JUST FOLLOW THESE EASY RULES!

OFFICIAL RULES

1. NO PURCHASE NECESSARY. Get a FREE MAKE MONEY game piece on request at checkout lanes — one per adult (18 years or older) per store visit.
2. EASY TO PLAY. Use the edge of a coin to gently rub off the silver squares in the lower left and right corners of the piece. If they are the same cash or product prize, you have an INSTANT WIN. If they are different, detach in the center and save along with the game piece you collect each time you shop. When you match left and right halves showing the same cash or merchandise prize, you WIN.
3. PRIZE CLAIM. Submit and initial in his presence matching prize halves to the store manager for verification and awarding of your prize. Prizes of $50 and over will be paid after verification by the office.
4. GAME MATERIALS will be judged void if illegible, altered, mutilated, forged, tampered with in any way, not obtained legitimately, or where prohibited by law. We reserve the right to reject and void any materials containing printing or other errors.
5. ENTRIES. All materials submitted for winner verification become the property of the sponsor. Tax liability on prizes is the responsibility of the prize winners. When the total number of approved winners in any of the prize level quantities listed is achieved, that specific cash or merchandise prize will be terminated without notice and entries submitted for that specific prize will be rejected.
6. LOCATION. This promotion is available at 37 Big N stores located in Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania. Employees of Neisner Brothers, Inc., its game suppliers, its advertising agencies, and members of their immediate household families are not eligible to play.
7. TERMINATION. This promotion is scheduled to end on January 21, 1978. It will officially end, however, when all MAKE MONEY game pieces are distributed, at which time an announcement of promotion termination will be made. All prizes must be claimed within 7 days after announcement date or they are forfeited.
8. REPEAT. This promotion may be repeated when this series ends.

SHOP OFTEN! SHOP NOW! BE A WINNER!
